For Fruit Growers, Cold Weather Damage Will Depend On Location, Varieties

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
BIRD IN HAND (Lancaster Co.) — Cold weather the first weekend in April didn't necessarily spell catastrophic losses for fruit growers, as some in the industry originally thought.

Actually, for peach growers, it may have helped to thin the fruit set.

But for growers of Red Delicious apples and for growers in certain locations, crop damage could have been extensive and costly.

Growers in the south central part of the state with orchards on south slopes of hills below the mountains should be concerned that certain apple and peach varieties (especially early varieties of peaches) could have experienced damage because of cold temperatures in which temperatures dropped to 24 degrees or below, according to Tim Elkner, Lancaster horticulture agent.

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — Jersey breeders from across Pennsylvania gathered in Pottsville April 18 and 19 to celebrate achievements, present awards, and conduct their annual meeting.

The convention opened Friday night with an awards banquet highlighted by the crowning of the 1997 Pennsylvania Jersey Queen.

After delivering a presentation and answering an impromptu question, Jennifer Harris of Lehigh County was chosen to wear the crown and succeed 1996 Pennsylvania Jersey Queen, Roberta McConnell.

Also a current Northampton/

Lehigh County Dairy Princess, Harris is a senior at Northwestern High School. She is the daughter of Lynn and Renee Harris and

DAIRY MARKET PRICE COMMENTARY

This week, Lancaster Farming begins a new weekly market commentary for dairy farmers. As government moves away from dairy price supports, the need to follow dairy markets increases. Dairy Week will appear near the end of our regular market pages—this week turn to page A20.

On Tuesday afternoon this week, Ken Kauffman, orchard manager with A.L. Kauffman Sons, inspects peach trees at the Kauffman's Bird In Hand location. A.L. Kauffman and Sons, in the industry since 1915, grows about 40 varieties of peaches on 35 acres. They grow 80 acres of apples, 1½ acres of plums, three acres of pears, and 1½ acres of cherries.

The well-kept dairy farm of Norm and Kathy Hershey and son and daughter-in-law Mike and Tina, and grandson Tyler represents the 8th generation of the family to live on the farm and is located along Route 340 east of Intercourse in Lancaster County.

DHIA National Director, State President Gives Thoughts On The Dairy Situation

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

GORDONVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — "Good cows, good feeds, and hard working people have made a lot of successful dairy farmers in the past and will do so in the future."

This quote came from an on-farm interview with Norm Hershey, the new national director of DHIA. In addition, on Wednesday, the Pennsylvania DHIA board elected Hershey president of the state organization.

At home where Hershey's family farm, located along Route 340 east of Intercourse, now extends to the 8th generation, dairy philosophy is turned into everyday practice.

Quality forages are grown on the 300 farmed acres. These home-grown feeds are balanced in a TMR mix made to accommodate a one-group cow operation.

"The most important management activity on the farm is producing the best forages possible," Hershey said. "This is true especially where farmland comes with such a high value land base. With high fixed costs and overhead, you must get production to pay the bills. If you have the farm paid for and want to coast, that's fine. But if you have a mortgage to pay, you need to shoot for high production."

For Norm and his wife Kathy and their son, Mike, daughter-in-law Tina and grandson, Tyler, age

1, this translates into a 21,000 lb. herd average on 65 registered Holsteins. They raise all the heifer calves for replacements and cash crop soybeans. But most of the farming operation revolves around producing milk.

With his new responsibilities in both the national and state DHIA

APRIL 23, 1997

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was disappointingly slow. Seller offerings were fully adequate to ample and excess product was difficult to clear. Live supplies were at least moderate; weights varied, but were mostly desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate to heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 59 to 73 cents. Trade sentiment was barely steady to weak. In the parts complex, all items were noted as fully adequate or available for the limited buying interest.

National Grain MarketST. JOSEPH, MO
APRIL 23, 1997

Wheat bids were lower as traders corrected recent sharp upturns due to varying reports about freeze damage in hard red winter wheat. Corn bids were pressured by profit taking on the board and forecasts for improved weather conditions in the Midwest. Soybean bids were moderately higher with new crop beans higher on ideas that better corn planting progress and high wheat prices will keep the pressure off of soybean acreage. Wheat 8 to 12 cents lower. Corn 2 to 3 cents lower. Sorghum 5 to 6 cents lower. Soybeans 2 to 4 cents higher. MAY DAY, MAY 1.

LAW, LEIS, AND LOYALTY

Depending on where you live, you might celebrate May 1 as Law Day (U.S.), Lei Day (Hawaii), or Loyalty Day (designated by Congress in 1958). Most of us think of it simply as May Day, a celebration of spring with its origins in the early Roman and Druid festivals, particularly the Beltane or "Bel's fire" rituals of lighting fires on high hilltops to honor the returning Sun. Since the May sunshine rivals that of August in its intensity, and this month's Full Flower Moon is on the rise, spring flowers should be plentiful enough to fill the May baskets of early risers who know where to look.

*He that is in a town in May,

TIP OF THE WEEK

For longer-lasting daffodils, cut them when color just shows at the bud tip but the flower is not open.

HAWAIIAN SPARERIBS

- 4 to 5 pounds pork spareribs
- boiling, salted water to cover
- 1 cup pineapple juice
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon curry powder

Parboil spareribs in water for about 20 minutes. Make a marinade with the remaining ingredients. Drain water from spareribs, pour on marinade, and refrigerate for 1 to 6 hours, turning to recoat once or twice. Barbecue or broil the spareribs 4 to 6 inches from the heat, for a total of about 30 minutes. Or you can bake the spareribs at 425° F, turning once, for a total of 45 minutes.

Makes 6 servings.

OPINION

Incentive To Continue To Milk Cows

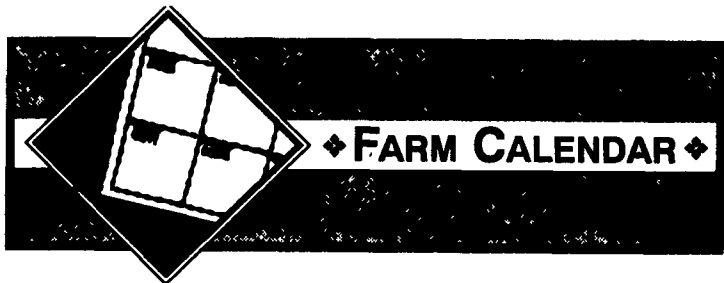

Last week the three-member Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) gave unanimous approval to extend the current 80 cents over-order price premium for one year, ending May 1, 1998. Without PMMB's action the over-order price for Class 1 milk produced, processed and sold in Pennsylvania would have dropped from 80 cents to 50 cents after April 30th.

This will provide much needed help for dairy farmers in Pennsylvania. Wholesale prices paid to farmers in February were already 80 cents below a year ago, so another drop in prices would have added more pressure to the income squeeze that is common among dairymen.

We commend the PMMB for acting in a timely matter on this issue so that there was no interruption in premiums to farmers. Without swift action the premium would have fallen by nearly 40 percent.

In addition, we note that no one opposed the action at the hearing earlier this month. Often there are many different opinions from various segments of the industry, but in this crisis, all farm organizations and dairy cooperatives supported the action. It is good to see the whole dairy industry united in the interests of dairy farmers.

We realize this action alone cannot make dairy farming profitable. It does however, provide some relief and incentive to continue to milk cows.

After reading your article about dumping (Rural Areas Become Dumping Grounds for Bottles, Cans April 19 issue) I feel the need to write to you. I and all others need the farmer. But some years ago, the farmer removed all fences along the roads so he can turn and make the headland on the road. Always to save time, he tries to haul extra large loads on the manure spreader and loses much of it on the road. After washing my vehicle and driving through this to get home, I get the idea that the highway is becoming a dumping ground for him. Maybe he likes this splashed over his vehicles, but I do not.

I must get a permit to move wide articles on the highway, but this same farmer may take a very wide piece of machinery down some road, and I go into the field to pass him. I do not throw my cans, bot-ties in his fields, so why does he cover the road with so much of his stuff? My patience is running out also.

I recently received my 1997 Penn State Trustee Ballot. In light of the recent events regarding our Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius, I have decided to write in his name as a Penn State Trustee.

Many of you might not be aware that prior to being appointed as Pennsylvania's Secretary of Agriculture, Charles Brosius was an elected member of Penn State's Board of Trustees. When he became Secretary, he continued to serve as a trustee by virtue of that position. Obviously, the elected position he held was

Now Is The Time By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Prepare For Ryelage

Rye is growing rapidly. The question is, will you be ready to harvest this flush of early spring growth in a optimum manner? asks Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County extension dairy agent.

Are your silos ready to be filled? Are you and your equipment or your custom operator ready to roll when the time is right for harvesting?

Rye should be ensiled at the boot stage of maturity. Because it matures so rapidly, you have only a few days for harvesting.

The window of opportunity is very small. So, when the time comes, make ryelage harvesting job one!

To Plan For First Cutting

Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County extension dairy agent, said there is generally a small window of opportunity for making the first cutting of hay or haylage.

Usually it is around the middle of May when you are busy planting corn.

Again, take advantage when you get a few successive days of good weather. This may mean temporarily halting corn planting activities or hiring some additional labor.

You need a bigger break in the weather to make hay than to plant corn. If you miss this first break, the next opportunity may not come until weeks later.

Watch the weather reports closely and start cutting at the beginning of a predicted break in the weather even if the crop may be more immature than you prefer. You can always give the crop a chance to recover by harvesting the second cutting at a more advanced stage of maturity.

Once you harvest the first cutting early, you may take pleasure knowing the second cutting of hay is growing while you continue planting corn. Hopefully, you have captured good quality in the first cutting and set yourself up for an extra cutting for the season.

To Look At Cows Vs. Fieldwork

Fieldwork and barnwork are high priority jobs for dairy producers.

These are jobs that compete with each other during planting and harvesting seasons, according to Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County extension dairy agent.

For a milk producer, cows are job one! They are the income end of the business. Therefore, do not shortchange cows for the purpose of getting the fieldwork done.

You need to provide enough time for the best cow person to manage the herd for optimum performance. However, timely fieldwork is key to the success of a dairy farm.

If necessary, hire additional help or rely more heavily upon the services of a custom operator to get the fieldwork done. Another option is to grow less feed and rely more heavily on smartly purchased feeds.

The emphases is on smartly purchased. Harvest time may be a good time to make major feed buying decisions. It gives you first access to available supplies of high quality feeds at harvest time prices.

Another advantage is feed may be moved directly from field to your storage. This saves the cost and inconvenience of extra handling and hauling and loss in quality when fermented feeds are transferred.

2 Peter 2:4-10

When I was a young man I visited New York and, attending a television quiz show, was picked from the audience to audition as a contestant.

Everything in the interview went very well until they asked me, if I won any of the prizes, how I would react. "Don't worry about me," I assured them, "I'll stay calm and collected." That brought the interview to an end quickly.

What I didn't realize was they didn't want contestants who stayed calm and collected. They wanted people who could generate some excitement and I had assured them that they could count on me not getting excited.

STAYING CALM

Today, when I remember that incident, I ask myself where I ever got such an obsession with staying calm. Calmness, of course, is a very good character trait in certain situations. But there are other circumstances in life that call for excitement, yes even passion.

Some of us spend our whole lives trying to be quite dispassionate in every circumstance. When there is a dispute, a dispassionate voice is usually the constructive one. When there is an emergency, someone needs to keep us calm. But there are also times when we need excitement, enthusiasm, and even, perhaps, a bit of abandon when we are doing something for the Lord.

Some of us try to keep our religion dispassionate and often this is to our detriment. I have often observed that we keep our worship services calm and our church business meetings emotional. Sometimes, perhaps, it ought to be the other way around.

That's what inspires the letter of Revelation to Laodicea: "I know your works: you are neither cold nor hot. Would that you were cold or hot! So, because you are lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew you out of my mouth" (3:15). A church that is lukewarm is usually useless. It isn't bad, but neither is it really good. Being lukewarm is no blessing for anyone.

NEITHER COLD NOT HOT

What causes us to be so nauseatingly tepid? In the case of the Church at Laodicea it was apathy bred of self-satisfaction. "For you say, I am rich, I have prospered, and I need nothing; not knowing that you are wretched, pitiable, poor, blind and naked" (3:17). Churches that are self-satisfied are useless. Churches that feel no sense of challenge are also useless. And the same thing applies to individuals, too.

In my early days of ministry in the church someone said, "A church without a debt is a church without spirit." I'm not sure that that maxim can be applied to all churches everywhere, but I have observed that a church in debt is more likely to pull together in unity than one without indebtedness. It's not the debt that is important, but the challenge to accomplish something.

Even the church at Philadelphia draws his praise: "I know that you have but little power, and yet you have kept my word and have not denied my name ... because you have kept my word of patient endurance, I will keep you from the hour of trial ..." The Philadelphians are not praised for passivity, but for patient endurance. There is a difference. Patient endurance requires heart and Spirit. Passivity is just lukewarm and useless.

(In October, Rev. & Mrs. Althouse will lead a 14-day tour to Turkey to trace the footsteps of Paul and John. For information, write: 4412 Shenandoah Ave., Dallas, TX 75205.)

TILT

MAXIMUM PROTECTION, MAXIMUM YIELD.

If there was one method of protecting 60% to 85% of your wheat crop, and increasing yields an average of 10% to 20%, wouldn't you do it?

YIELD PROTECTION

When you treat with Tilt fungicide at the flag leaf stage – the stage that affects 60% to 85% of your yield – you're protecting wheat from yield-robbing foliar diseases like rust, tan spot, Septoria and powdery mildew.

Highest yields are normally obtained when Tilt is applied once, beginning at flag leaf emergence up until the flag leaf is fully extended and the ligule is visible on half of the plants in the field. (Tilt may be applied earlier if disease symptoms appear.)

Always read and follow label directions.
Tilt® is a trademark of CIBA-GEIGY Corporation
U.S. Patent No. 4,079,062

PROFIT PROTECTION

In more than 10 years of tests, Tilt has been shown to increase yields by an average of 10% to 20% and increase test weights by 1 pound per bushel. That's more money in your pocket.

If maximum protection sounds good to you, contact your Tilt dealer.

NEW HOUSE INCENTIVE

Empire Kosher Poultry is offering an incentive for new broiler houses. A $.0025/lb bonus will be added to the pay of all new houses for the first 15 flocks. The new houses will be state-of-the-art facilities.

The new house incentive is for a limited time. When a designated number of houses are completed the new house incentive will be discontinued. If you have ever wanted to get into the broiler business, now is a great time.

State Grange Pleased With PMMB Decision

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)
— The Pennsylvania State Grange is satisfied with Friday's announcement that the extension of the 30-cent increase in the over-order premium will be continued for one year beginning May 1.

The 30-cent additional premium had been slated to end on April 30.

Brenda Shambaugh, Pa. State Grange legislative director, said the testimony presented by the Grange at a public hearing before the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) on April 9 clearly showed that the extension was needed.

"There was, in fact, no testimony against continuation of the extension," Shambaugh said.
"The extension gives Pennsylvania dairy farmers a safety net as they continue to recover from the crippling fall in prices the last quarter of 1996. The extension will alleviate some of the financial strain felt on the farm and is certainly a step in the right direction."

As an advocate for rural Pen-sylvania, the Grange is a leading force in agricultural and rural issues. The Grange, with over 31,000 members in 66 counties, is why Queen Elizabeth prefers it.

Robert Gabel, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Grange Dairy Committee and a dairy farmer from Newport, Perry County, testified that his feed and forage costs have increased 37 percent over the immediate past 12 months, as compared to the same months in the previous year, while his income has decreased.

"Because the feed supply was low, my feed costs have increased," Gabel told the board.
"I do not believe feed costs will decrease significantly in the future."

Other factors have also worked against farmers, according to Gabel. Erratic weather, depleted corn reserves and escalating grain prices have held down profit margins, he said.

Gabel, who milks 40 and owns a total of 100 cows on approximately 400 acres, said his yearly feed costs alone increased $14,572 between 1994-95 and 1995-96 due to low feed supplies, which drove up the price of feed and forage for his herd.

"In addition to feed costs increasing, other costs have also escalated," Gabel told the board members. "Veterinary fees and services, equipment repair and equipment replacement costs have also increased. The bottom line is this: My farm cost per hundred-weight of milk for the year ending on Sept. 30, 1995, was $5.15. The following year, however, my cost per hundredweight of milk increased $7.28. Today, this costs per hundredweight is at $7.38, leaving profit margins very tight and placing a financial strain on the farm operation."

Pressured By Spring 'Flush'

NEW HORK — The spring "flush" continues to spread through the US and is pressing on fluid milk prices as supplies are beginning to exceed demand in many regions.

In Florida and the southeast, ideal weather conditions have kept output at peak production levels. Florida shippers were moving 16 to 18 loads of milk out of state each day, according to the USDA's Dairy Market News.

In the northeast, Class I prices were firm due to storm warnings. However, condensed skim and fluid cream prices were weaker due to fluid milk surpluses that were said to be moderate to heavy, according to the USDA.

In the western US, production is high due to cool nights that have balanced higher daytime temperatures.

Total March milk output in the 20 major producing states totaled 11.5 billion pounds, up 3% on a year-to-date basis, according to the USDA. Per cow output in these states averaged 1,491 pounds, up 22 pounds from March 1996. The number of cows on farms in the 20 states was 7.73 million-head, down from 8.63 million-head from March 1996. First-quarter 1997 milk production was 38.8 billion pounds, down 0.6% from the first quarter of 1996. The average number of milk cows in the US during this period was 9.26 million-head, down 133,000 head on a year-to-date basis, according to the USDA.

NATIONAL CHEESE EXCHANGE

At the National Exchange in Green Bay, Wis., cheddar cheese prices weakened in line with lower milk prices. Cheese barrels were down 4.75 cents per pound at $1.17 per pound while 40-pound blocks were down 5¢ to $1.20 per pound Friday.

Seven cars of blocks traded. The market closed with bids on 3 cars of blocks unfilled and offers for 10 cars of barrels uncovered.

BUTTER

Butter prices also felt the pressure of building milk supplies. Grade AA butter at the Chicago Mercantile fell 13¢ to 91¢ per pound while Grade A was down 13¢ to 80¢. Grade B dropped 14¢ to 78¢ per pound.

GRAINS

Wheat prices firmed amid crop concerns in the US and overseas. Traders said the market was underpinned by the recent freeze damage in the hard red winter wheat belt, although loss estimates continue to vary from less than 100 million bushels to more than 200 million. CBT Jly wheat settled at 4.44 ¼ per bushel Friday.

Corn is seen riding the coattails of higher wheat prices. Demand is keeping old-crop contracts firm, while new-crop finds pressure from the impending large crop. As farmers head to their fields, demand for corn in the cash market is pushing basis levels up. CBT Jly corn settled at 3.00 ¼ Friday. Friday's USDA cattle-on-feed report was termed neutral to slightly supportive. The increase in feed demand shown by the data was mostly accounted for in the last quarterly stocks report, according to traders.

Dairy futures contracts followed the downward trend in the dairy cash markets.

At the Coffee, Sugar, and Cocoa Exchange, May fluid milk futures settled up 13 points at 11.45c Friday but the contract lost 58 points on the week.

The June BFP contract settled at 12.01c Friday, down 6 points from Thursday and 6 points for the week.

BFP trading has received a favorable start, traders said. Total open interest Friday was 254 contracts.

The Chicago Mercantile Exchange's (CME) June butter contract settled at $1.0275c Friday, down 4.25c for the week.

CME June fluid milk settled at $12.75 Friday, down 75 points for the week.

Comprehensive Dairy Evaluations Now Available Quarterly

BELTSVILLE, Md. — The U.S. dairy industry will be able to pinpoint some of the best bulls and cows three months sooner than usual, thanks to a doubling in the number of dairy evaluation reports issued each year through the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The Dairy Herd Improvement Association provides the information for the reports.

Starting May 5, the reports will be issued quarterly rather than semi-annually and will evaluate each animal based on all its relatives enrolled in the Dairy Herd Improvement Association program. The reports which animals are outstanding in characteristics such as milk yield; milk composition; somatic cell score, an indication of resistance to the disease mastitis; and productive life, a measure of longevity and animal well-being.

Farmers and businesses specializing in artificial insemination and embryo transfer rely on the dairy evaluations to help identify the best animals for breeding.

"Finding out sooner which animals are top quality just makes sense," said geneticist Duane Norman, who heads the ARS Animal Improvement Programs Laboratory here, where the evaluations are calculated. "If a farmer identifies a high-performing cow when she's younger, it's possible he can get more offspring from her during her lifetime."

Increasing the number of evaluations will also enhance international marketing opportunities for the U.S. dairy industry.

"We don't want to make U.S. artificial insemination organizations wait up to six months before knowing the quality of their bulls, that puts them at a disadvantage with breeders and businesses in other countries who receive their evaluations as frequently as monthly," said Norman. "Each generation of livestock improves over the last, so the sooner U.S. breeder can take advantage of that, the better."

Advances in computer power and streamlined processing procedures have cut the time needed to prepare the report from eight weeks down to five, Norman said. The reports will be issued in May, August, November and February.

USDA has provided the bull evaluations to the dairy industry since 1935 and cow evaluations since 1964.

State Grange Testifies For Bottle Bill

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Grange legislative director testified Monday before the House State Government Committee that passage of a returnable container law would create more jobs, lead to less energy consumption and fewer livestock injuries and deaths. Brenda Shambaugh, Pa. Grange legislative director, said long-standing Grange policy backs HB 922, which calls for a 5-cent deposit on non-biodegradable beverage containers to encourage even more recycling across the state. "Grange members have valid reasons for advocating this type of legislation," Shambaugh said. "Many of our members have lost valuable livestock and ruined expensive machinery from tossed bottles and cans. Many times livestock suffers needlessly because bottles and cans are thrown into pastures. These animals are severely cut by broken glass or on sharp metal edges. Permanent damage or loss of life is a real threat for these innocent victims." As an advocate for rural Pennsylvania, the Grange is a leading force in agricultural and rural issues. The Grange, with over 31,000 members in 66 counties, is a rural, agricultural and community service organization dedicated to improving the lives of rural Pennsylvanians through legislative action, offering member services and participating in community affairs. Shambaugh said farmers also face monetary loss because people carelessly litter in their fields. "Machinery breakdown is another serious problem caused by bottles and cans aimlessly tossed aside," Shambaugh said. "Glass and metal can ruin machinery worth thousands of dollars and each time a tractor tire has to be replaced a farmer loses over $500. Moreover, farmers regularly deal with the nuisance of spending hours picking up other people's garbage." Shambaugh cited a study of Delaware farmers that shows an average annual loss of $2,500 due to litter. "One can assume that Pennsylvania farmers would have similar losses," Shambaugh said. "The only difference is that Pennsylvania's populations is much larger than Delaware, so the litter problem would be compounded." A second benefit of a "bottle bill" law is less energy consumption. Shambaugh said a study in New York state showed a 20 to 67 percent decrease in energy consumption: an annual savings of between 2 and 4.3 million barrels of oil and $50 to $70 million. "Currently, energy wasted by 60 billion throwaways represents the electricity needs of 9.1 million Americans a year; gasoline to fuel 2.1 million cars a year; or the natural gas needed to heat 2 million three bedroom homes in the mid-Atlantic region for eight months," Shambaugh said. Refuting claims that jobs would be lost with passage of returnable container legislation, Shambaugh said additional jobs were created in states that have this law. A total of 4,648 jobs were gained in Michigan; 1,800 in Massachusetts, and 500 in Vermont. "Looking at the employment situation, Pennsylvanians without jobs would benefit from this legislation," Shambaugh said. "HB 922 is vital to preserve our Commonwealth economically, environmentally and aesthetically."

occurs when temperatures reach 28 degrees, Elkner said.

But despite the worries, Lancaster and other counties could potentially harvest good peach crops. "Right now it looks like we'll have a pretty good year if the weather cooperates from here on out," said Elkner.

On Tuesday afternoon this week, Elkner was helping Ken Kauffman, orchard manager with A.L. Kauffman Sons, inspect peach and apple trees at the Kauffman's Bird In Hand location.

A.L. Kauffman and Sons, in the industry since 1915, grows about 40 varieties of peaches on 35 acres. They grow 80 acres of apples, 1½ acres of plums, three acres of pears, and 1½ acres of cherries.

Kauffman also spoke to several growers in Lancaster County and the region. But he said those on the south slope of mountain ranges in Adams County are worried about cold damage to the crops.

When inspecting the peach trees, Elkner and Kauffman were taking apart the flowering pink buds, looking at the ovule, or base, of the bud. If the ovule appears green or white, it is healthy and potentially can develop good fruit.

If the ovule appears brown or black, it is dead.

Elkner reached to pinch off one of the flowering buds. He said, "When we split this open, you notice the base swells to become the peach," he said. The base, if brownish in color, indicates a dead bud. The base, or ovule, is the "most sensitive part, down there where your peach forms. The rest of it can look just fine and yet, when you open it up, it'll be dead."

Kauffman found few of the dead ovules on the trees he inspected on two separate sites: one on the northern side of a ridge and the other at the top of a ridge.

Kauffman has been in touch with growers in other counties. He spoke recently to growers in Adams County.

"I talked to three guys last Wednesday out there and got three different answers," said Kauffman. "One thought he had a thinnable crop and the other agreed with that — (noting that) they are kind of spotty by variety. And the third one just kind of shook his head and said, I wonder if we have what we think we do. He thinks some (buds) are going to drop off yet."

Kauffman, who grows 35 acres of peaches and 80 acres of apples,

When inspecting the peach trees, Elkner and Kauffman were taking apart the flowering pink buds, looking at the ovule, or the base of the bud. If the ovule appears green or white, on right, it is healthy and potentially can develop good fruit set. If the ovule appears brown or black, at left, it is dead.

While some of the Smokehouse variety blossoms survived, the Lodi variety was "hit pretty good," said Kauffman.

said that on April 5, open blooms were evident. Normally, he said, the orchard would see a week's worth of bloom and that would be it. But this year, cool weather has been prolonging the bloom.

"It's been cool, it's been cloudy — so you're not building up any residual heat," Elkner said. "Then it gets cool at night. People don't realize you need the warm temperatures at night to help things keep developing. And the fact that we haven't had any heat building up in the soils during the day, and the fact it gets cool at night — everything has been slowed down again."

Elkner suspects that the warm temperatures — one day in February going as high as 80 degrees — weren't sustained long enough to get the plants "de-acclimated," he said, to the cold.

Peach tree blossom damage occurs when temperatures reach 28 degrees, he said. There is some browning on the top and sides of these blossoms.

Essentially, the 80-degree day wasn't sustained by near-record warm temperatures — in fact, as quickly as the temperature reached 80, they quickly fell back into the 40s and 50s.

However, in Adams and Franklin counties, temperatures soared into the 70s. Some of the south slopes containing orchards could have maintained those temperatures long enough to advance the bloom. Then cooler weather came.

Adams and Franklin county growers "were a little colder" than Lancaster "and I'm not sure if they were a little further along," said Elkner. Also, "somehow I think it was a little bit warmer over there" earlier in the season, he noted.

During the April cool-down in Lancaster County, Kauffman indicated the peaches had "everything from 10 percent to 100 percent bloom," he said. "There were just a few early blooming varieties that were open, about 100 percent. But those aren't even 100 percent gone."

"It defies logic," said Kauffman. "We're not sure why they're still alive. And they may drop yet."

"When you work with Mother Nature, you don't always have answers for everything."

Like with corn, "your average season is based on your average temperatures," Elkner said. "So we're right about where we should be blooming now. If we have average weather, then the crop will harvest at about the same time. The weather affects you all the way along." And even with fruit set, the cool, cloudy conditions keeps bees

Elkner, pictured here, and Kauffman inspected some apple varieties. They both noticed extensive damage with the side and king blooms on many varieties, but most especially the Red Delicious.

First-Ever Sweet Corn Field Day Set For August

ANDY ANDREWS
LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — There's Dairy Day. Then there's Weed Day. Why can't there be a regional summertime Vegetable Day?

On Tuesday, August 5, Penn State will sponsor the first-ever Sweet Corn Field Day at the Penn State Landisville Research Center. The field day will provide growers with a look at 36 varieties of sweet corn, including white sweet corn, in addition to studies involving herbicide use and controlling sweet corn pests.

According to Tim Elkner, Lancaster County horticulture agent and event organizer, the field day will allow growers to study the different varieties available from an array of seed companies. There will be taste-testing and some other treats. It will also provide the local extension office with a chance to learn what growers would like to see in the future at similar field days.

It could lead, according to Elkner, to an all-day type event, a region-wide Vegetable Day.

(An annual Vegetable Day is held in February as part of the winter meeting schedule, sponsored by the Young Adult Farmer Program in New Holland, along with Penn State. But the purpose of the day in August is to provide an in-the-field look into the performance of varieties.)

Penn State has yet to work out the exact details of the meeting, including times. But growers from all around the region, including Lancaster, York, Chester, Berks, and Lebanon counties, are welcome to attend.

Elkner said that under inspection at the field day would be the sugar enhanced (SE) varieties, not the SH2 varieties — yet.

The SH2s are only now slowly making inroads with growers in the region.

Included in the variety trials will be some bicolor and yellow varieties.

Elkner said he plans to place the seeds he obtains for the variety trials into three groups: the 70-, 75-, and 80-day varieties. He will plant them in order so that, theoretically at least, all three groups should be ready for tasting on August 5.

"The day will examine how to grow the corn and look at some of the things we need to do next year," said Elkner.

Sweet corn represents the number one vegetable crop planted by Pennsylvania farmers. According to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, in 1995, 19,500 acres of sweet corn for fresh market were planted.

Landisville will plant the corn on 24-inch rows. A soybean planter is used to make double rows with a four-foot gap between to allow growers to inspect the corn.

Also, Penn State will feature an entomologist and weed specialist to examine the insect and weed control options for growers.

Elkner said the field day will help growers who can't find the varieties they like pick and choose which ones to grow the following year. Importantly, an informal survey will be conducted to determine what growers would like to see featured in subsequent sweet corn field days.

Who knows? according to Elkner. The day could itself blossom into a Vegetable Day, also featuring strawberry varieties, vine crops, and garden vegetables.

More information about the exact time of the event will be available at a future date and printed in Lancaster Farming.

Fruit Meeting To Look At Cold Damage

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Fruit growers have an opportunity to assess what the extent of this year's cold damage could be on peaches and apples by attending the Lancaster/York Fruit Growers' Twilight Meeting on Thursday, May 1, at Hampshire Orchards on Camp Road.

The meeting is set from 6:30-8:30 p.m. and includes information on early season insect and mite control by Dr. Carl Felland, information on early season disease management by Dr. Jim Travis, and chemical thinning, tree nutrition, and managing vigorous trees by Dr. Rob Crassweller of Penn State.

Co-sponsored by Penn State, the twilight meeting will provide pesticide credits in the fruit category. Included will be a tour of the orchard, which began in the early 1980s. Planting has continued since then and the orchard is 40 acres in size.

Much of the fruit grown at Hampshire Orchards is sold at the on-site market. There are 20 acres of peaches and 20 acres of apples. A range of varieties is planted to extend the harvest season.

Newer apple plantings are on dwarfing rootstocks at high density. The Hampshires also have a cider operation to utilize small and off-grade fruit.

For more information, contact Tim Elkner, Lancaster horticulture agent, at (717) 394-6851.

Christopher Reeve And Family Receive Thorncroft Strength Of Human Spirit Award

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia was the site of the 12th Annual Thorncroft Victory Gallop, where more than 525 guests enjoyed a lavish evening of entertainment, excellent food, and dancing from the balcony and ballroom floors of The Park Hyatt Philadelphia at the Bellevue.

Christopher Reeve, his wife Dana, and son Will were honored as the family winners of The Thorncroft Strength of Human Spirit Award recently at Thorncroft's Annual Victory Gallop. As winners, Reeve and his family received specially commissioned medallions presented by members of Thorncroft's Family of the Year, the Smith Family.

The Strength of Human Spirit

Award is Thorncroft's highest honor. It is presented to individuals or families who, by their outstanding achievements and great strides, have inspired people with a diversity of abilities to rise above human conditions to learn and grow together.

A highlight of the evening was Christopher Reeve's moving acceptance speech shown on a towering video screen in the Bellevue's main ballroom. Following the acceptance speech Christopher Reeve's mother, Barbara Johnson, personally accepted the group award on stage with Thorncroft's Family of the Year, the Smith Family.

Thorncroft's 1997 Family of the Year, the family of Karen and Bruce Smith, were also recognized at the Victory Gallop. With three children of their own, the Smiths have served as foster parents for up to 10 children with special needs, some of whom ride at Thorncroft. The Smiths were chosen for their dedication to children — sharing their own strength and family values with those around them.

Students from Thorncroft will benefit from the Victory Gallop as participants of the extensive scholarship program. The fund, which exceeds $35,000, is helping more than 100 riders who otherwise would be unable to participate in the therapy offered at Thorncroft. Proceeds from The Victory Gallop will also benefit Thorncroft's building and endowment funds.

from working to pollinate the apple trees.

In this part of the country, growers have to worry about the peaches and nectarines. "If we get a real warm spring early on, then they come out and bloom and you have to worry about frost or freeze," Elkner said.

One bad year for peach growers was 1994, when the state suffered a complete loss to cold damage. In that year, where normally Kauffman would harvest 10,000-11,000 ½-bushel baskets, they actually harvested only 700 baskets.

For peaches, the condition could be worse. Kauffman noticed that growing is slow. What would have been pollinated even two weeks ago, "it's growing so slow, you can't watch the progress like you normally would."

Elkner and Kauffman inspected some apple varieties. They both noticed extensive damage with the side and King blooms on many varieties, but most especially the Red Delicious.

This could indicate a problem statewide if the cold temperatures were severe enough.

In one of Kauffman's apple orchards, much of the area is in somewhat of a basin. Cold temperatures and shielding from wind caused by buildings could have created cold enough conditions to kill a great deal of the crop.

While some of the Smokehouse variety blossoms survived, the Lodi variety was "hit pretty good," said Kauffman. Growers need to go out and check to assess the damage — in some cases it could be a complete loss. In other cases, work on thinning could be reduced and some growers could experience a good harvest.

For Lancaster County peach growers, the news is good from many growers, according to Elkner. "So far as I can tell, everybody is going to have some fruit," he said. As for Kauffman, "he's going to have to do some thinning out here right now, as far as I can tell."

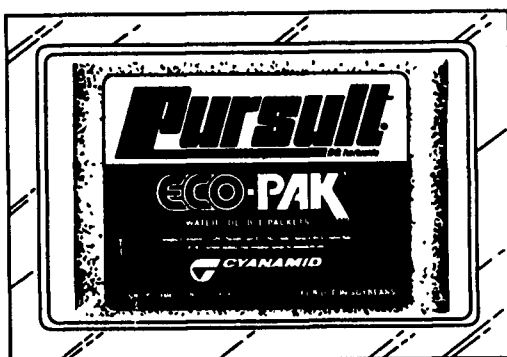

RELENTLESS CONTROL MEANS RESIDUAL CONTROL.

All season. PURSUIT® herbicide combines contact and residual activity to clear out more than 40 weeds, including velvetleaf, cocklebur, shattercane, nightshades and foxtails. In fact, PURSUIT gives you the greatest overall weed control available. And that means you get the greatest return on your investment.

For heavy infestations of grasses, use the premiere sequential program of PROWL® followed by PURSUIT.

Relentless control means residual control. For soybeans, nothing is more important.

For Kauffman, it will take about two weeks to assess what damage there is and what steps he will take to ensure good crops. Adjustments may have to be made to the bud thinning systems (he uses a mechanical bloom thinner) and further fruit thinning. (Thinning is accomplished to reduce fruit set to eight inches apart in either direction.) After spraying and other programs to eliminate diseases such as brown rot and bacterial leaf spot early on in the season, harvest won't be conducted until mid-July through mid-September.

For Adams County and other areas, the talk from growers is that the damage is going to be "variety specific and site specific," said Kauffman. It will depend on the stage of growth the variety was in and location.

Pennsylvania Home Grown, Homemade Competition Announced

"Be a Winner in the 1997 Pennsylvania Fair Home Grown and Homemade Competition," urges Beverly Gruber, CFE, chairman of the Competitive Exhibits for the upcoming fair to be held at the Philadelphia Park Race Track on May 15-26, 1997.

Potential Exhibitors may enter their creative work in a wide variety of classes outlined in the 1997 Exhibitors Handbook. All home grown and homemade products produced by the exhibitors are welcome at the fair. Categories of entries include Home Baked Products, Canned Products, Needlecraft, Arts, Crafts and Photography, Hay and Grain, Vegetables, Nut, Fruits and Berries, Christmas Trees, Floral Exhibits, as well as Homemade Wine. The 72-page guide lists possible cash prizes and rules for entry, display and removal of exhibits. First, second and third place cash prizes as well as ribbons will be awarded to each class. A "Best of Show" Ribbon will also be given in each general category. For your official 1997 Exhibitors Guide, write to P.O. Box 5, New Tripoli, PA 18066, or call (610) 767-5026.

Entrants are reminded that they can enter only one item in each class, and are encouraged to pre-enter their items to avoid the last minute rush. By submitting your entries ahead of time, the processing becomes quicker and easier for both participants and the Fair officials, but it is not mandatory. Actual entries must be brought to the Philadelphia Park Race Track Building on Wednesday, May 14 between the hours of 1:00 and 8:00.

Four special classes will also be held in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Fair. Nearly $1,600 in premiums will be paid out in the "Blue Ribbon Apple Pie Contest," the "Decorated Cake Contest," the "Special Quilt Contest" and the "Decorated Wreath Contest."

The "Blue Ribbon Apple Pie Contest" will be held on Saturday, May 24 at 2:00 in the Pavilion area. Entries need to arrive by 1:30. The pie will be judged on overall appearance, the color, flavor, texture and doneness of the crust, the consistency and doneness of the filling, and creativity. The recipe must accompany the entry. The top prize in this contest is $500.

The "Decorated Cake Contest" will be held on Saturday, May 17. Again entries need to arrive by 1:30 and will be held in the Pavilion area. The Cake must use a Fair Theme and the overall height cannot exceed 30" and the base cannot exceed 14". A $500 check goes to the winner of this contest.

The "Special Quilt Contest" entries need to be entered on May 14, 1997. A $250 award will be given to the winner of this class. Quilts can be entered under applique, embroidered, pieced or other categories. Individual winners receive $10 with the champion receiving the $250.

The fourth contest is the "Decorative Wreath Contest." Wreaths entered in this competition must be handcrafted and decorated using any base listed below. Use your creativity and develop your own beautiful creation. The grand prize in this contest is $250.

As with most fairs in Pennsylvania, there will be competition for Youth, 4-H and FFA, as well as the Open Class Competition already mentioned. There will also be Beef Cattle, Sheep, Swine, Goats, Poultry and Rabbit Competition.

This marks the eleventh year for the Pennsylvania Fair at Philadelphia Park. Again, to receive an exhibitors guide, call (610) 767-5026.

Yeo Farms Lamb Show, Sale Reported

LOWELLVILLE, OH — While 4-H programs in Mahoning County (OH) may be threatened by the county's fiscal woes, 4-Hers from other counties in Ohio, as well as from Pennsylvania and Maryland enjoyed Yeo Farms' annual 4-H Open House here Saturday. Thirty-four youth participated in the Livestock Judging Contest Saturday morning. Twenty-two club lambs were then sold in Yeo Farms Club Lamb Sale Saturday afternoon, where enthusiastic bidding pushed prices up more than 27 percent from the level of last year. This was the second year in a row which prices advanced sharply at Yeo Farms Club Lamb Sale.

Lamb Prices Up 27%

The highest priced lamb was the last one to sell. After a three-way bidding contest, this fancy ewe lamb was successfully purchased by Becky Rice-Overstreet of Charlotte Hall, MD for $250. Other top-priced lambs went to Brandie North of Waterford, and Mike O'Neill of Titusville. In all 7 ewe lambs and 15 wether lambs were sold at an average price of $138. The sale featured lambs out of Yeo Farms' new wether buck.

Henry and Roberts Win Judging Contest

Winning first place in the individual judging competition was Ross Henry of Grove City, in the junior division and Sarah Roberts of Bryantown, MD in the senior division. Out of a perfect score of 400, Henry scored 348 and Roberts scored 361.

In the team competition, the competition was tight in the junior division with only two points separating the top two teams. The blue ribbon was captured by a team consisting of Philip DeSenze of North Lima, OH; Kevin Farrell of Charlotte Hall, MD; Bryan Hirschbach of Jewett, OH; and Jonathan House of LaPlata, MD. Close behind in second place was a team consisting of Dusty and Reva Douglas, of New Wilmington; Ross Henry of Grove City; and Shawn Ligo of Mercer.

In the senior division a team consisting of Beth Braun of Mechanicsville, MD; Carrie Moore of LaPlata, MD; Jill Rice of Charlotte Hall, MD; Sarah Roberts of Bryantown, MD easily won first place. The second place team came from Mercer County, with Alex and Jeremy Barbour of Stoneboro, Randy Henry of Grove City, and Erik Irwin of Fredonia.

In all there were four junior teams made up of young people between the ages of 8 and 12, together with five senior teams made up of young people between the ages of 13 and 18.

John Allen

Guest Livestock Judge

Each 4-H participant was asked to evaluate 8 classes of livestock, containing four animals each. There were four classes of beef cattle and four of Suffolk sheep. The classes were prejudged by a guest livestock judge, John Allen III of Armstrong Farms in Saxonsburg. Allen has shown cattle all over the country, was a star member of the Penn State Judging Team while in college, and is a past president of the American Junior Shorthorn Association.

Participation in the judging competition was the same as in 1996, even though participation from local counties was down sharply. This year there were only two contestants from Mahoning County and none from Lawrence County, whereas in 1996 there were 20 from Mahoning and three from Lawrence County. The decline in numbers from these nearby counties was completely offset by increased numbers of contestants from Charles County, MD and Mercer County. The Lamb Club of Ashtabula County, OH provided the snack bar for the event.

Yeo Farms regularly schedules a 4-H Open House on the third Saturday of April. This was the 11th year for this event. Leaders of 4-H judging teams use the Yeo Farms contest as a way to begin the judging season and to prepare their teams for competition later in the year at county and state fairs.

Pennsylvania Jersey Sale Averages $1,869 On 48 Lots

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent
PINE GROVE (Schuylkill Co.)
— A choice of flush topped the 1997 Pennsylvania Spring sale Saturday, April 19, at Meadow View Farm.

The sale, which averaged $1,869 on 48 lots, was the highest averaging sale managed by Jersey Marketing Service (JMS) this year, according to JMS representatives.

The top bid of $5,000 was for a choice of four heifers sired by Khan or one heifer sired by Beretta, consigned by Pine-Crest Partners of Pine Crest. The choice was purchased by Pyramid Genetics, of Fairfield, Vt.

The second high seller is headed south as she was purchased by Hilltop Jersey Farm, of Chandler, Texas. The heifer, Molly Brook Ferretta Flow-ET, was consigned by Molly Brook Farms, West Danville, Vt. and commanded a price of $4,500.

Rounding out the top three sellers was Shaker View Khan Waltz-ET, a calf consigned by Barbara Benson, of New Lebanon, N.Y. and purchased by Peter Vail, of Kinderhook, N.Y. for $3,750.

For the junior Jersey members, seven Pot of Gold consignments averaged $582. The top seller was Normandell Dan Pride, consigned by Cathleen Norman, Liberty. The calf was purchased by Matthew Wolfe, of Selinsgrove, for $675. A three-way tie was recorded for the second high sellers.

MVS Marcus Kindel, consigned by Craig and Terry Rhein, of Pine Grove, and purchased by Chris Wenger, of Leola; Wilderness Barber Tizzy, consigned by Robert and Helene Dreisbach, and purchased by Jeremy Mack, Denver; and Rog-Al Barber Sandy, consigned by Roger Alexander and purchased by Garrett Stonerook, were each purchased for $625.

Twenty-five percent of the gross from the Pot of Gold sale will be set aside in a special fund and will be distributed to the junior whose calf, purchased in this sale, made the highest production record on her first lactation.

Also sold were three units of Brook semen, consigned by Robert and Helene Dreisbach, which commanded a price of $230 per unit. The semen was purchased by Jeff Reasner.

Auctioneer Larry Kempton, of Vermont, brought buyers and sellers from across the United States together. Nearly 200 people attended the sale with many bids coming in by phone. The sale was managed by the Jersey Marketing Service under the direction of sales staff Neal Smith, David Parkinson, and Scott Bascom.

Penn State Names Conti Distinguished Alumnus

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science has named Dr. Pierre A. Conti as its 1997 Distinguished Dairy and Animal Science Alumnus.

Conti is associate director of facilities and operations in the department of veterinary sciences at Bristol-Myers Squibb's Pharmaceutical Research Institute in Princeton, N.J.

Conti returned to Penn State's University Park Campus April 18-19 to visit with faculty and alumni of the Department of Dairy and Animal Science.

A Pennsylvania native of Williamsport, Conti received his bachelor's degree in animal science from Penn State in 1956. As a student, he was active in the Pre-Vet Club and participated in the Little International livestock exposition.

After earning his veterinary degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1960, he served in the U.S. Air Force as chief of base veterinary services at L.G. Hanscom Field in Bedford, Mass., from 1960 to 1962. From 1962 to 1963 he was an associate veterinarian at Bellingham Animal Hospital in Bellingham, Mass.

Conti was senior veterinarian at Merck Sharp and Dohme Research Laboratories in West Point, Pa., from 1963 until 1985, when he was named head of Research Veterinary Services and director of graduate studies in Laboratory Animal Science at Hahnemann University in Philadelphia and associate professor of surgery at Hahnemann Medical

While at Hahnemann, Conti developed and directed the first graduate degree program in laboratory animal science in the country. This continues to be a unique program that trains animal science students to become supervisors and colony managers for research and animal facilities. A number of these students go on to veterinary school.

Conti has published more than 29 research papers and has acted as a consultant to a variety of agencies, organizations and institutions, including the Department of Veterans Affairs Medical Centers in Philadelphia and East Orange, N.J.; the Medical College of Pennsylvania; Drexel University; Wistar Institute; and the Fels Institute for Cancer Research at Temple University.

Conti is a diplomate of the American College of Laboratory Animal Medicine and a member of the American Veterinary Medical Association, the American Association of Laboratory Animal Science, the American Society of Laboratory Animal Practitioners and the Association of Primate Veterinarians.

He is a fellow of the Academy of Surgical Research and member of the founding Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania Society for Biomedical Research.

Conti also is a member of the board of directors of the newly reactivated Pennsylvania Veterinary Medical Historical Society.

organizations, Hershey has some goals he would like to see happen in his tenure as director and president.

"I would like to see more stability in the DHIA system," Hershey said. "Things are changing so rapidly, I'm afraid we have been reacting rather than taking a planned course to help the affiliates. I believe National DHIA's primary job is to help the affiliates serve the dairy farmer. If on the national level we react to individual farmers and farm groups, we lose sight of our mission to serve affiliates."

"It seems almost all DHIA's are involved in a law suit or are under a threat of legal action," Hershey said. "We need to do something—and I'm not sure what this is—to help affiliates work to serve dairymen without infringing on the business rights of everyone in a free enterprise system."

"We have taken some steps to help this situation. We have tried to get out of the policing business."

But some DHIA members feel DHIA is not doing the job if we allow others outside the system to provide service normally provided by DHIA.

"You still need some rules to conduct business, but how do you enforce rules and still keep a level playing field? In the past DHIA records had an 'official' rating. But today records are in more of a 'buyer beware' situation with each dairyman responsible for the integrity of his own records."

"The trend toward low input and low output farming also gives a whole new meaning to the value of herd averages and input costs."

"The future of DHIA has started today. Mergers allow more efficiency. Data processing is getting closer to the farm. The base of dairy farms is shrinking. And the number of 2x once-a-month supervised on-the-farm testing is decreasing. This trend does not give DHIA associations the same base for developing new products like the milk marketing coopera-tives have. Nevertheless, as the needs of dairymen change DHIA must change to meet these needs. The open environment has changed the competition, but it has brought some good."

Norm Hershey recently began his first term as National DHIA director and was this week elected Pennsylvania DHIA president at the state board meeting at State College.

Hershey does not think DHIA is too costly for the average dairyman. "We have often taken a defensive attitude, almost apologetic for the cost of DHIA," Hershey said. "This has given the impression that we don't have value. But MUN testing to help regulate your feeding program; component testing to select for what you get paid for; and performance economics where the total economic condition of the farming operation is recorded, all furnish dairymen with management tools that are very necessary and cost effective in the modern dairy operation."

Hershey ran unopposed for the national directorship with support from Northeast, Ohio and Pennsylvania DHIA's. He also is vice president of the local school board.

At the state DHIA level other officers named this week along with President Hershey are, Dale Hoover, Lebanon, vice president; Neal McCulloch, Newville, secretary; and Mark Eby, treasurer.

"I believe family farms and the climate around Pennsylvania will keep dairy farming in a viable position for many years to come," Hershey said. "We have excellent soils and rainfall to grow good forages. We are close to markets and have the work ethic to make it happen. The dairy business is going to be alive and well form many years to come. The challenge for DHIA is to serve these dairymen in their changing needs."

Field Pea, Hulless Oat Show Promise As Pig Feed

FARGO, N.D. — Two crops that are good for North Dakota crop rotations are also good for North Dakota pigs, research shows.

In tests at North Dakota State

University's Dickinson Research Extension Center, swine specialist Doug Landblom found that field pea and hulless oat could replace much of the corn and soybean meal in traditional diets for young pigs.

"We're seeing a number of changes in North Dakota because of the freedom to farm provisions of the Farm Bill," Landblom explained. "Producers are looking for new crops to use in crop rotations that will expand market options, and livestock feeding is certainly one of those options."

Landblom said hulless oat and field pea are good choices for producers on the northern plains. "These are cool-season adapted crops that can be planted and harvested with existing equipment. The crops give producers new options to choose from when they're looking for rotations that break insect and disease cycles," he said. And field pea is a legume that adds nitrogen to farm fields. In NDSU research, scientists found that when field pea straw was left in the field, pea added 1 to 1.25 pounds of nitrogen to the soil for every bushel of pea harvested.

"Producers have demonstrated that they can raise these high quality crops in areas where climate doesn't favor corn and soybean production," Landblom said. "Our intention was to show that we don't need to ship them out of state. We can add value to them right here by feeding them to livestock."

Earlier research at the center by NDSU livestock specialist Chip Poland showed the two crops also could be used in beef diets. Poland found that, when compared to barley, the net energy estimates for hulless oat are approximately 14 percent higher for maintenance and 19 percent higher for gain in cattle.

Unlike traditional oat which contain up to 30 percent high fiber hulls, hulless oat like the new NDSU variety, Paul, contain only 5 percent hulls. That makes them a nutrient-dense high-energy feed, Landblom said.

In research with starter diets of early-weaned pigs, Landblom found that hulless oat can replace all of the corn and a portion of the soybean meal in the diet. Feeding raw pea cut performance in pigs smaller than 11 pounds. But for pigs larger than 16 pounds, raw pea could be fed at rates of up to 20 percent of the diet. Extruding the pea didn't boost performance significantly.

Landblom combined the two crops in a diet for pigs averaging 13 pounds at 19 days of age. He found that pigs on a diet containing 80 percent naked oat and 20 percent extruded field pea performed as well as pigs on a traditional corn and soybean meal diet. The pea were extruded to neutralize compounds found in pea that may limit pigs' use of the crop's nutrients.

Even with the added cost of extruding the pea, an economic analysis showed that feeding a diet of locally-grown field pea and hulless oat was more profitable than shipping in corn and soybeans, Landblom said.

Next, Landblom and other NDSU researchers plan to look at diets containing other crops grown on the northern Great Plains to determine if more profitable livestock diets can be formulated.

"Each of our crops like barley, canola, hulless oat and field pea offer some real nutritional and economic advantages," Landblom explained. "We want to know what we can do if we combine those advantages."

Landblom presented the results of his research to scientists gathered in Des Moines recently for the joint Midwestern meeting of the American Society of Animal Science and the American Dairy Science Association.

National Farmers Union Calls On Congress To Amend NAFTA Before Expanding It

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congress should correct shortcomings in the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) before expanding it to include other countries, National Farmers Union Vice President of Government Relations Larry Mitchell testified before the House Agriculture Committee's Subcommittee on General Farm Commodities.

According to Mitchell, the current agreement does not adequately address dispute resolution, currency fluctuations, food safety standards and reporting of agricultural trade.

"Despite the fact that producers continue to be bombarded with pro-NAFTA information from commodity groups, agricultural publications and the media in general, their support of the trade agreement is waning," Mitchell said. "Their pocketbooks are what tell the truth about NAFTA."

Highlighting a number of recent examples where the U.S. has lost its disputes with other countries, including Canada's ban on dairy imports from the United States, Mitchell noted that the U.S. win-loss ratio in NAFTA dispute resolution is "dismal."

"The fault cannot be laid at the feet of only one (international trade) team, as we have seen problems going back to the Canadian Free Trade Agreement," Mitchell said. "The problem lies in an inadequately drafted agreement which has unilaterally disarmed the U.S. in dispute resolution."

Mitchell urged U.S. producers and agribusiness not to take American consumers for granted. He called for "continuous, not just occasional, minor sampling" of imported foods, noting that the expenses for such inspections should be paid by the exporter. He also urged that all imported foods be required to have country-of-origin labeling.

"U.S. taxpayers have spoken loudly and clearly that food safety should be one of this country's highest priorities, and the return on this investment has been considerable — a safe, stable food supply," Mitchell said. "We must continue to cultivate our domestic market as we would our export opportunities."

Mitchell told the subcommittee Farmers Union members are pleased with recent U.S. Department of Agriculture initiatives to make available import and export statistics for livestock trade among the U.S., Canada and Mexico. He urged standardization of trade data and also asked that the data be available to more producers than just those privileged and talented enough to have access to the Internet.

In addition, Mitchell urged that provisions be made to address currency fluctuations. "Until there is establishment of a common measure of currency to prevent unstable, dramatic fluctuations of currency, whether natural or manipulated by central banks, we will never have fair trade agreements."

Little Synthetic Lysine

COLUMBIA, Mo. — A little synthetic lysine is good in a lactating sow ration. It saves money.

Too much, though, can slow litter growth.

A study by animal scientists at the University of Missouri-Columbia (MU) evaluated the effects of replacing soybean meal with up to .225 percent L-lysine HCl in the diet of the lactating sow.

The study showed that supplying up to .075 percent L-Lysine HCl in a .79 percent digestible lysine corn-soybean meal diet is not detrimental to lactation performance. However, when more than

.075 percent L-lysine HCl was used, litter growth was reduced.

"There has been an ongoing question as to whether crystalline lysine, often a less expensive lysine source, can be used as a substitute for part of the soybean meal in a lactating sow's diet," said Mark Newcomb, MU researcher. "The answer is yes — as long as the amount of the synthetic is restricted to the amount we suggested."

Kevin Touchette, Gary Allee and Newcomb reported on their study at the Midwest meeting of the American Society of Animal Science.

Allentown Fair Announces First Four Shows

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — The Great Allentown Fair's grandstand is going a little bit country and a little bit rock 'n' roll, judging by the first four concerts announced for this year's exposition running August 26-September 1.

After a drought of classic rock shows in recent years, the Fair is opening with back-to-back electric guitar-toting headliners. On Wednesday, August 27, The Steve Miller Band will make its Fair debut. On Thursday, August 28, rock's "little 'ole band from Texas," ZZ Top, will be back at the Fair for the first time since 1983, when its mega-selling "Eliminator" album first went on the market. Tickets for both shows go on sale starting at 10 a.m. Saturday, April 26.

Swinging over to the Fair's staple, country music, one of its most renowned male performers, Vince Gill, is joined by the Country Music Association's "horizon" award-winner Bryan White for a Friday, August 29 concert. And on Saturday, August 30, John Michael Montgomery, who is riding high on the success of his current album "What I Do Best," will perform with country band Ricochet, which has been posting singles on the charts. Tickets for these two shows go on sale starting at 8 a.m. Tuesday, April 29.

None of these announced Fair headliners have a shortage of material to perform. The youngest of the artists, John Michael Montgomery, has produced four albums selling a combined 10 million copies including his most-heralded release, "Kickin' It Up," which debuted at No. 1 on Billboard's Top Album Charts in 1994. Some of his top singles include "I Love the Way You Love Me," "I Swear," and "Sold! (The Grundy County Auction Incident)." Montgomery's special guest, Ricochet, is a six-member band that hit No. 1 with its first single "Daddy's Money" and an a cappella version of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Vince Gill is known as one of country's perennial hit-producers with six top albums, eight Grammys and every country music organization's award presented. The recent material from his "High Lonesome" album has been as strong on the charts as his earlier successes, "Pocket Full Of Gold" and "I Still Believe In You." Gill's opening act, Bryan White, is on his own ladder to success being the youngest artist nominated for the Country Music Association's Male Vocalist of the Year title in 1996.

ZZ Top had been off the road awhile, but the trio recognized for long beards and their trademark classic Ford from "Eliminator," came back on the scene in a big way, playing to a mega stadium and television audience at this year's Superbowl half-time. Naturally, the boys sang their anthem "Legs," which catapulted their career from a cult to mainstream following. While their most noted hits, like "Cheap Sunglasses," "Pearl Necklace" and "Tube Snake Boogie," were recorded in the '70s and '80s, they continue to produce new material like this year's "Rhythm" and album and singles "Black Fly" and "What's Up With That."

The Steve Miller Band is known for turning concerts into hours-long jam sessions and this year's "Jokers Ball Tour" is being billed as such. The band has sold over 2.5 million concert tickets in the last eight years, even though the band is celebrating the 20th anniversary of some of its biggest hits like "Jungle Love," "Jet Airliner," and "Swingtown."

All seats for the country concerts are reserved. The grandstand is reserved and the track is festival for the rock concerts. Tickets to all of the shows are $23. Admission to the Fair is $4 for persons ages 12 and over. Half-priced $2 Fair admission tickets may be purchased before August 27.

For fair box office hours, Ticketmaster and mail order information, call (610) 435-SHOW (7469) or visit the Fair's website at www.allentownfairpa.org.

Asgrow/Seedway Addresses Demand

HALL, N.Y. — Growers enthused by the performance of Roundup Ready soybean seed can order 1998 Roundup Ready seed needs now according to Don Wertman, Seedway president.

Experts predict 70 percent of soybean acres planted in the future will be Roundup Ready. To meet this demand, the industry must increase seed stocks at an unprecedented rate.

Growers and dealers have been frustrated by the lack of availability of Roundup Ready seed for 1997 planting. Asgrow wants to avoid that situation for 1998. Through March 31, 1997 customers can contract for 1998 seed through Seedway dealers.

Seed contracts are subject to confirmation by Asgrow, however, once confirmed, customers will receive the seed per the terms of the contract.

Wertman said, "Customers can lock in a supply of the best varieties now and avoid the frustrations of pro-rate next winter."

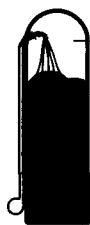

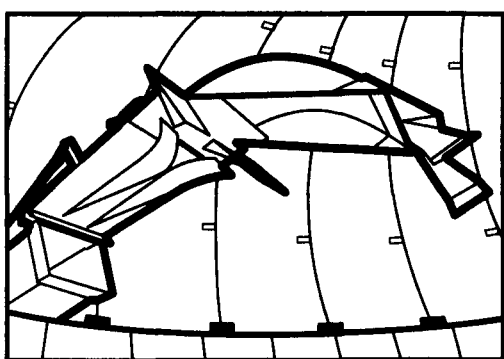

Asgrow RR soybean varieties are in demand because Asgrow placed the Roundup Ready gene into elite, new germ plasm, not older varieties. Field performance in 1996 was excellent.

Ordering seed a year in advance is common for seed companies, but it's a new concept for most customers according to Wertman. New technology requires new approaches and Asgrow/Seedway is providing an opportunity to meet anticipated demand.

Lebanon Earth Day Event Focuses On Achievements, Goals

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The non-farming public desires to live in an environment that offers visual open spaces and a sense of natural, everyday healthiness and safety, according to sentiments expressed during an Earth Day event Tuesday night at the Lebanon Campus of the Harrisburg Area Community Campus.

And they want to be able to afford it.

Lebanon County once offered that in big doses.

There's some left, but other than what little is being preserved through the county farmland protection program is being sold to the highest bidder and usually that's one of several regular developer/speculators who closely track land availability and the potential for subdivision and profit.

And while the county was recently featured in a Harrisburg newspaper because of the negative effects of the widespread residential and retail development to the county's aesthetics, economics, traffic system, public services, and recreational opportunities, the tenor of the presentations from six speakers representing various environmental concerns was positive.

April 22 was officially Earth Day, an observation that started 27 years ago to stimulate the general public into an awareness of their surroundings, and how their day-to-day activities affect it and are affected by it.

The program in Lebanon was the first effort by a coalition comprised of the Lebanon County Conservation District, the Lebanon County Groundwater Education Team, the Lebanon Campus of the HACC, and the Quittapahilla Audubon Society.

The event — "Earth Day Report to the Community" — was offered in the form of a progress report on environmental issues and programs affecting Lebanon County.

Admission was free and the three-hour event attracted an audience of about 50 people, with some people arriving and leaving throughout the evening.

While the event was not designed to target the agricultural community, the topics are of concern to those in agriculture. It was also of interest for farmers and land owners because of the outside perspectives of agriculture presented.

A number of booths were set around the perimeter inside a large gymnasium-sized auditorium, while others were set up in the downtown college campus lobby.

Six speakers discussed various areas of environmental concern in the county and their understanding of problems and how they have or haven't been handled.

The speakers included William Kurtz, director of the Lebanon County Planning Department; County Commissioner Jo Ellen Litz; Jim Thorne, of the Philadelphia regional office of the national Nature Conservancy; Charles Wertz, director of the Lebanon Conservation District; Lawrence Taylor, engineer with the the Greater Lebanon Refuse Authority; and state Sen. David Brightbill, former chairman of the Senate Environmental and Energy Committee and prime sponsor of key legislation that permits the reuse of historically contaminated industrial sites by removing cleanup liability hurdles.

County Background

Lebanon County arguably was, up until recently, an idealic pastoral county with most residential development near the the industries that offered jobs, and those industries generally developed, or developed along, transportation routes.

The county is a limestone valley community with a mountain ridge at its north and another running parallel along the south.

Commerce and industry and the residential development of workers and business owners developed along an east-west line, generally following major waterways.

The farmland developed along east-west strips also, between the mountain ridges and the center population strip, so that the county resembles a sandwich.

The city of Lebanon had canals, railroads and roadways passing through its heart that connected Harrisburg and the Susquehanna River to shipping points along the East Coast.

A steel industry, spurred by the Cornwall Iron Ore Mine, plus energy from northern coal fields and forests, and lime from limestone mines combined to create a wealthy community that had little need to make any concessions to develop a tourism industry, although it offered some top-notch outdoor recreation, outside of a couple of streams sacrificed to industrial and municipal waste.

Like many other communities, the Lebanon Valley developed around the workings and business ventures of several wealthy families, and some of those families donated some of their land holdings for public use and that became parks, such as Coleman's Park.

Also, although much of the mountains were public or private property, they were accessible to most of the public for hiking, hunting and fishing.

Then, about 20 years ago, land prices and residential housing demand began to increase.

The mark of the era of the commuter began during the late 50s and early 1960s, though its effects on community lifestyle were slow to bring change.

Up until then, it would have been relatively easy and safe for a person to walk from one end of the county to the other without suffering from threats of arrest for trespassing.

It wasn't until the late 1970s that heavily unionized manufacturing and industrial plants failed to survive competition from non-union workers overseas.

By the late 1970s, and early 1980s, the area's job market crashed and many lost their jobs and started commuting. At the same time, people with jobs in surrounding communities that weren't as rural and safe began seeking housing in the Lebanon area, creating demand for housing.

One of the strategies for redevelopment of the county, especially in the southern end, has been to create a bedroom community for people who can commute to surrounding areas for jobs and then brings the paycheck home to a clean, residential environment.

Development was encouraged by leadership that saw an expanded residential tax base as a means for economic and political strength.

In the meantime, most of the municipalities were faced with the prospect of developing wastewater and water treatment facilities to accommodate new housing, or have development severely limited.

In order to accommodate further development — and also to correct failing onlot systems in older businesses, schools and communities — the leadership in a number of municipalities worked with Lebanon City to expand the city's sewer and water lines out into surrounding areas. Many of those communities then sold off their public lands.

State Sen. David "Chip" Brightbill discusses the issues that lead to the development of key legislation of which was author and prime sponsor that allows companies to reuse industrial sites and achieve public environmental health goals.

A number of high quality farms had right-of-way strips cut through them, with little recourse, though there were some contentious battles.

Leadership expressed an attitude that the best use of those farms was for residential development, and that the landowners were better off with the public utilities, because now they would get more for their property when they sold it for development.

Even though land grant university research showed that residential development costs more to local government in providing services than is collected in taxes, while agricultural and commercial land provides more in taxes than is spend on services, leaders ignored that research.

Now most of the once-public watershed properties along the southern edge of the county have sold to the private sector and some to the Game Commission.

The county farms were sold for development.

Now, bike riders have limited places to ride without heavy traffic. The Game Commission was forced to close one of its state Game Lands properties due to the overuse of trails by mountain bike groups and horseback riders.

Now, "No Trespassing" signs and attitudes have created a barrier to walking anywhere except along a roadway with heavy traffic.

And now, as groundwater supplies continue to be stressed and the county Planning Department is overwhelmed with request for subdivision plan approvals, now all county commissioners have announced their support of the farmland preservation program.

Up until recently, only one or two commissioners supported the program at any one time.

Those same public officials have suggested that those farms are now the best land for residential development because they have access to public sewer and water.

The county has Swatara State Park — a 7-mile long park along the northern border that encompasses the banks and some draws along the upper stretch of the Swatara Creek that is still affected by coal mining residues and silt.

Also in the northern end of the county there is Fort Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, which allows controlled public use of its land, a National Cemetery that provides a wildlife refuge, and access to Stony Creek Valley (an unoccupied valley of state Game Lands that stretches 10-miles to Dauphin).

But recreational pressure is hitting all of the county's facilities fairly hard, and there is no incentive for developers to share in the cost of supporting recreational facilities or designing the subdivisions to allow for community recreation.

Speakers

From the county Conservation District's perspective, Wertz said he hoped to convey a message that there is hope for the county, and that some progress is being made in preserving non-renewable resources, such as the county's prime farmland.

He said that future for the county isn't all bleak, but that citizens have to become active in letting their political leaders understand that they want them to support the farmland preservation program.

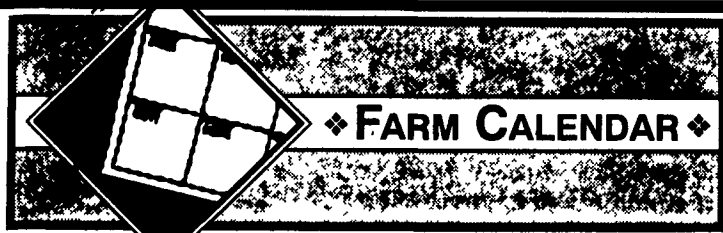

Wertz told the group that the goal of the district is to help people work and live in the harmonious use of natural resources.

Though not part of his presentation Tuesday, the Lebanon District has been involved in a variety of projects over the years toward that end, especially such pilot and demonstration projects as spray irrigation of liquid hog manure on forestland to use the nutrients in a beneficial manner and reduce the cost of manure management for farmers.

The District has also been heavily involved with Chesapeake Bay Program cost-sharing projects, streambank fencing, community education programs such as sup-

Charles Wertz, director of the Lebanon County Conservation District, stands in front of the District's booth wearing a shirt with a 1994 national award winning Earth Day poster drawn by a local student, and talks with a reporter from a local newspaper about the Earth Day Event.

The Secretary's forced resignation not only affects his position as our Commonwealth's agricultural leader, but also as Penn State Trustee. Therefore, I will cast one of my votes for Charlie. Perhaps other friends will find it appropriate to do the same.

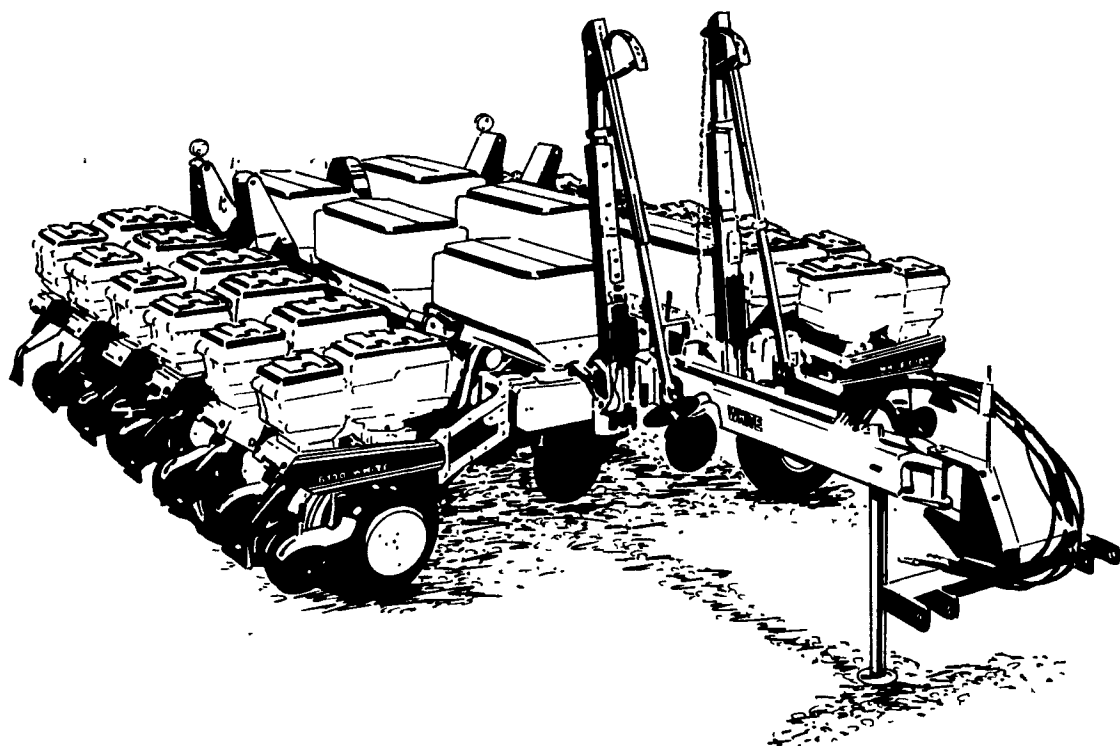

Kerry L. Golden

Editor:

After having read considerable accounts about the demise of Secretary of Agriculture, Charles Brosius, I thought perhaps you would like to know how an ex-Lancaster County poultry farmer looks at the situation. On April 5, '97, I was one of perhaps three-hundred people to attend a breakfast at a large restaurant in Mt. Joy when Gov. Tom Ridge was the speaker. He gave a rather long but excellent speech where he kept emphasizing his ideas for a new Pennsylvania.

He further stated that agriculture is the leading industry in the Commonwealth. Most of the legislators from the County were in attendance, most of whom I know personally. It was my first experience with meeting the governor personally, and I was impressed with his desire to improve many aspects of our state's problems. He discussed a wide variety of topics from the court system, environment, rules and regulations of and for agriculture and many others.

On Monday, April 7, many people were shocked to hear that the governor had asked for the resignation of Secretary Brosius. Most of us do not know the reason and would not care to venture a guess. I, for one, do not know Mr. Brosius. He appears to be a fine gentleman, however, there must be some serious misgivings about his position. Please let's look at something else.

As my wife no longer is physically able to shop for groceries, this now falls on my shoulders. This affords an opportunity for me to do the grocery shopping. As a rule I go to at least two or three large super markets within two miles of our home and even to a little Amish mom and pop grocery a few miles away.

What I have noticed for years is that Lancaster County and/or Pennsylvania chicken is not available at any of these large stores. Weis, for instance, has somewhere close to eight or nine stores in our county and perhaps 180 or more in the state. I have asked the managers of these stores "Why no local chicken?"

They just shrug their shoulders. SKH managers say to me, "We have specials 'sometimes'." What answers! I have told them as a Lancaster County farmer, "I'm insulted."

Please be informed that Weis, Redners, Giant, and SKH almost exclusively handle chicken from south of the border. Think of the millions of people in this state that are buying out of state chicken instead of Pennfield or Tyson. How can this be? Whose fault is it? I blame the Secretary of Agriculture for allowing this to happen. Isn't he responsible for the quality of food we eat? Isn't he the one who Lou Ann Good said in the April 15 issue of Lancaster Farming received a standing ovation? For what? Has he been helping the Pennsylvania poultry producers to sell more of their production in Pennsylvania stores? I, for one, think not. How do you suppose he would like it if none of his mushrooms were sold in local stores? Then what would he do with his 40 employees? Perhaps there was a very good reason for him being terminated, to which I would consent. Isn't it more important to put Pa. chicken in local food stores than to pass a new dog law?

Saving The Planet With Higher-Yield Farming

The Chemical Question

"Farm chemical pose virtually no threat to the world's wildlife," states Dennis Avery in his book. DDT (banned for decades) and PCBs (not a farm chemical) are still being blamed for abnormalities of the nation's wildlife. These are still being used as scapegoats because there is no current proof of significant harm to wildlife from pesticides farmers are using today.

Saving Soil

With Farm Chemicals

To sustain agriculture means controlling soil erosion. High crop yields radically cut soil erosion in and of themselves. When yields are tripled on the best crop acres, soil erosion per ton of food is cut by two-thirds.

Since 1970, herbicides have given high yield farming another powerful tool for conserving land, water and wildlife. No-till and conservation tillage farming have been made possible by herbicides. These practices cut soil erosion by 65-90 percent.

High fertility, herbicides and conservation tillage literally stops soil erosion in its tracks. Currently, 100 million acres are being farmed using that formula in the US and more are being added annually.

The Promise Of Biotechnology

Biotechnology is the largest unexploited piece of knowledge we have about how to increase the productivity of plants and animals. The future holds great potential to improve the performance of livestock with less feed, higher crop production with fewer inputs, etc.

Protecting Water Quality With Precision Farming

There has been valid criticism of agriculture regarding the loss of nitrogen, phosphates and pesticides from the plant root zone. Only one percent of pesticides are getting out of the fields, but that is too much for the public's comfort.

Precision farming involves the use of navigation satellites and microprocessors to put exactly the right amount of seed, fertilizer and pesticide on each square foot of each field to match its soil type, slope, plant population, cropping history and nearness to waterways.

"Tomorrow's crop field will be planted with genetically-engineered seeds that incorporate bred-in pesticides and stress tolerance; using a low-till farming system that virtually defies erosion; and guided by precision electronics to use not an ounce more of chemicals than the plants will need — and not an ounce less," slates Avery.

Preventing Cancer With Pesticides

Avery also indicates that farm chemicals play a major role in helping us save human lives, by preventing natural born toxins from infesting our food, by reducing cancer rates and by preventing heart disease.

Fungicides prevent the infestation of stored commodities and growing crops. Insecticides and rodenticides prevent seed damage that would let the fungi in.

More important, pesticides are a key factor in providing ample supplies of attractive, low-cost fruits and vegetables. Medical professionals agree that fruits and vegetables are the strongest defense against cancer and heart disease. "How many of us would eat adequate fruits and vegetables if they cost two or three times as much and were full of whorm holes?" asks Avery.

Organic Farming

Can't Save The Planet

It is Avery's conclusion that true "organic farming" is too low yielding and can't save the people or the wildlife from starvation.

Complicating that problem is that organic nitrogen only accounts for 20 percent of the nitrogen needed to support current world food production — let alone tripling farm output for the future. Additional organic nitrogen could be produced with the production of millions of square miles of alfalfa and clover, all at the expense of wildlife and its habitat.

Bright Prospects For Farm Export Reform

Avery points out that if research and technology are pursued, and higher yields are achieved, global farm policy needs to be changed. Free trade of farm products will be needed.

The Freedom to Farm Act, and GATT reform may lead the way to a level playing field for American farmers. The world will meet in 1999 to re-examine the farm trade provisions of the Uruguay Round.

If American is strong enough to lead the farm trade revolution, free trade can be achieved.

"If American farmers want to help save the world with their high-yield farming, they will have to want it enough to lead the Federal government and the farmers of the world. The dynamics are favorable — but it's up to the American farmers."

March Milk Production Down 1 Percent

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Milk production in Pennsylvania during March 1997 totaled 939 million pounds, 1 percent below last year's production, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS).

The number of milk cows in the state during the month averaged 639,000 head, unchanged from February and 6,000 less than March 1996.

Production per cow averaged 1,470 pounds in March, 180 pounds more than February and 5 pounds more than March 1996.

Grain and other concentrates fed to milk cows in the state on April 1 averaged 18 pounds per cow per day, unchanged from a year earlier.

The value of grain and other concentrates averaged $10.50 per hundredweight, 20 cents more than a year ago.

Milk production in the 20 states surveyed during March 1997 totaled 11.5 billion pounds, slightly above production during March 1996.

Pound Of Prevention Remains Best Cure For Dairy Disease

DES MOINES, Iowa — Though researchers are closing in on ways to detect an elusive but devastating disease in dairy cows, the best way to control it is through prevention.

Johne's disease usually infects dairy calves, but doesn't become evident until they are two to five years old. Meanwhile, milk production begins to drop, cattle lose weight, reproductive performance drops, and the disease spreads.

The disease is estimated to cost the U.S. dairy industry more than $1.5 billion annually and there is some evidence that the disease may be spreading to beef herds.

The most common way to test for disease — including Johne's disease — is to look for antibodies to the disease in the bloodstream, explained Judy Stabel, a researcher at the USDA Agricultural Research Service's National Animal Disease Center in Ames, Iowa. But with Johne's disease, antibodies usually aren't detected until cows have been infected for years. And by then, diarrhea, weight loss and reduced milk production already offer good evidence of Johne's infection.

Stabel explained that in the early stages of the disease, the battle against infection is fought within the cow by individual cells and no antibodies are produced. She says there are tests under development that can detect those early, or subclinical, stages of the disease.

"If we can refine these tests so that we can test entire herds for subclinical and clinical stages of Johne's disease, it will be a big step forward in helping producers manage and control the disease," she said.

Stabel outlined Johne's disease research to scientists gathered in Des Moines, March 17-19 at the joint Midwestern Meeting of the American Society of Animal Science and the American Dairy Science Association.

Stabel noted that there is a vaccine available to protect cows from the disease, but it's only licensed for use in herds with known infections. And once the vaccine is used, diagnostic tests are unable to distinguish between infected and vaccinated cows, making management of the disease even more difficult.

She said that until a comprehensive testing program is available to producers, the best management strategy is to take steps to prevent the introduction and spread of the disease.

Johne's is typically spread in three ways: by calves getting infected by their mothers before birth, through contact with manure-contaminated food or by drinking milk from an infected cow.

"That means the producers need to assess the hygiene practices on their farms," Stabel said. To control the disease, Stabel advises producers to:

- Move new calves away from dams as soon as possible.

- Isolate calves to minimize contact with adult cows and their manure.

- Feed milk replacer or colostrum from cows known to be free of Johne's.

- Isolate heifer calves to protect them from infection.

- Isolate purchased replacement heifers from calves in case they are infected.

- Evaluate manure-handling habits to prevent disease spread through contaminated tools and equipment.

Stabel noted that some research suggests a link between the bacterium that causes Johne's in cattle and Crohn's disease in humans. Crohn's disease is an inflammatory infection of the lower intestinal tract. Work done at the National Animal Disease Center found that pasteurization processes like those currently used by milk processors will kill the bacterium, reducing its potential threat as a human pathogen.

Carroll County Tractor, Truck Pull Set

WESTMINSTER, Md. — The roar of customized tractor and truck engines and the applause of an appreciative crowd will ring out this weekend as Carroll County celebrates its annual rite of spring — the Tractor and Truck Pull at the Carroll County Agriculture Center on Sunday, April

The Ag Center's biggest fundraiser of the year attracts pulling enthusiasts from around the region who wouldn't miss the chance to see these modified farm tractors and trucks in their eternal struggle against the heavily-weighted, mighty Rebel Sled from Frederick County.

The pull itself will start at 9 a.m. with the farm stock competition. These are tractors owned and operated by regional farmers that have little modification beyond the equipment needed for normal farm use. They'll labor to pull the mighty Rebel Sled the farthest up the track to take home a trophy.

A Pedal Pull for kids at noon will have area 4-, 5-, 6-, 7- and 8-year-olds facing off in a small fry version of the larger competition. Toy tractors donated by area machinery dealerships are given as prizes to the top three winners.

At 1 p.m. the point pull begins. There will be 2-Wheel and 4-Wheel Drive trucks along with Modified, Super, and ProStock tractors. All of the drivers do their best to drag the mighty Rebel Sled out the end of the 300-yard track for a "full pull" and the chance to win their event.

Breakfast begins at 9 a.m. Pit beef, hamburgers, sausage, and ice cream will be available the rest of the day.

Admission is $8 for adults and $6 for kids 7 to 12. Kids under seven get in free with an accompanying adult. Seating is first-come, first-serve. Blankets and lawn chairs are suggested.

EPA Cites Pa. Chamber 'Scare Tactics'

PHILADELPHIA — At least 21,000 gas stations and storage tank owners in Pennsylvania are the target of scare tactics by the Pennsylvania Chamber of Business and Industry, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said this week.

The Chamber, a business lobbying association in Harrisburg, recently sent flyers to storage tank owners claiming the EPA has a "hit list" of owners not in compliance with pending federal regulations that can carry penalties of $10,000 a day.

For $130, the Chamber offers a so-called Survival Kit to keep owners up to date on the latest federal requirements.

The EPA and State of Pennsylvania, however, provide the same complete information in free booklets available upon request.

"There is no hit list," says Thomas C. Voltaggio, director of EPA's Hazardous Waste Management Division. "The State maintains records of storage tank owners, but we have never requested access. The Chambers' assertions are broad-based scare tactics designed to generate business by improperly characterizing the EPA."

The EPA requires all underground storage tanks to be upgraded by December 1998 to prevent spills, leaks and corrosion which pose a contamination threat to soil, ground water and surface water.

Tank owners have had 10 years to comply.

The costs to upgrade three 5,000 gallon gas station tanks for leak detection, spill and overflow retrofitting, corrosion protection, and interior tank coatings can range between $25,000 and $50,000.

A maximum late penalty may be assessed of $10,000 per day per tank.

History Program

WYOMISSING (Berks Co.) — The Heritage Center will be transported back in time to the year 1863 as a small camp of Pennsylvania federal regiment volunteers are enlisting new recruits.

The history program is scheduled Saturday, June 14, from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. The day will feature presentations by the camp surgeon, infantry, artillery, and civilians encamped here. Visitors are encouraged to walk throughout the encampment and talk with the reenactors.

This event is hosted by the Pennsylvania 53rd Volunteer Infantry Company C, supported by Durell's Ringgold Battery "D" Pennsylvania Volunteer Artillery, and is sponsored by the Berks County Parks and Recreation Department.

Refreshments are available. The Heritage Center is located 1 mile north of the Reading Airport on Route 183.

Pigs' Performance Is Positive With Potato Chip Scraps

DES MOINES, Iowa — Piggling out on potato chips may not be good for you, but it's just fine for young pigs, Ohio State University research shows.

"Our experiment demonstrates that potato chips can be an effective substitute for corn in the diet of nursery pigs," explained Sha Rahnema, a researcher at OSU's

Agricultural Technical Institute. Buying chips at the local convenience store probably isn't a practical option for most swine producers, but Rahnema and his students weren't feeding pigs off-the-shelf bags, but broken chips and those that didn't meet production standards. Chips from test batches and sample bags were also included in the diet.

Potato chip plants across the country sell this potato chip scrap by the truckload to feed manufacturers and livestock producers, Rahnema noted. "The problem is that there's no information on the feed value of that scrap."

He made his comments to scientists gathered in Des Moines March 17-19 for the joint Midwest meeting of the American Society of Animal Science and the American Dairy Science Association. He noted that feeding food processing cast-offs to livestock is nothing new. Bakery products and other food manufacturing byproducts are regularly used in feeding livestock.

"Environmental concerns are growing, so it's becoming more difficult to get rid of these products," Rahnema said. "That means finding a use for them is becoming more important. We have to have scientific information on hand for producers who want to take advantage of those opportunities."

In his experiment, Rahnema mixed the crumbled potato chip scrap in a pelleted complete diet and used it to replace up to 20 percent of corn in the diets of pigs that were 35 days old.

Average daily gain of the pigs during the two-week trial increased slightly over corn diets and feed intake dropped slightly, resulting in a significant improvement in the gain-to-feed ration. Chemical analysis showed the chip scrap contained about 34 percent fat and fairly high levels of salt.

Getting the pigs to eat the new diet didn't prove to be a problem. "People like potato chips," Rahnema said. "And pigs' tastes don't seem to be much different than our own."

Future research will focus on replacing more corn with the chip scrap and on using the diet for longer periods of time. "We're not sure what impact those high levels of fat and salt will have on performance and carcass composition over the long term," Rahnema said. "Our preliminary results, however, are very promising."

Ohio Cattlemen's Association Latest To Add Support To Civil Complaint On Interstate Shipment

MARYSVILLE, Ohio — The Ohio Cattlemen's Association (OCA) is the latest in a number of organizations voicing support for the Ohio Department of Agriculture (ODA) in its attempt to enable meatpackers to sell pork, beef, and poultry in other states.

"Ohio's state meat inspection program meets or exceeds the USDA federal inspection program requirements," a resolution adopted as policy by the OCA's

Beef Safety Committee said.

"All of Ohio's state-inspected meat plants should be eligible for interstate shipment," the policy statement continued, adding that OCA supports the ODA's "legal action against the USDA Secretary of Agriculture regarding this issue."

In the complaint filed by Ohio Attorney General Betty D. Montgomery on behalf of the Ohio Department of Agriculture, Fred L. Dailey (Director of the Ohio Department of Agriculture), Blue Chip Meats, Inc., the Herman Falter Packing Co., Gerber Poultry, Inc., and the Ohio Association of Meat Processors against the United States Department of Agriculture and Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman, the plaintiffs asked for injunctive relief as a result of the unfair prohibition against the interstate shipment of state-inspected meat and poultry products. Specifically, the plaintiffs prayed for:

•A declaration that the unfair prohibition against the interstate shipment of state-inspected meat and poultry products, to the extent the prohibition does not allow state-inspected meat and poultry to enter interstate commerce, deprive them of right secured by the Constitution of the United States.

•A permanent injunction barring the defendants from applying the unfair prohibition against the interstate shipment of state-inspected meat and poultry products, to the extent the prohibition does not allow state-inspected meat and poultry to enter interstate commerce.

Too Much Calcium Interferes With Finishing Pigs' Nutrition

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Watch the calcium. That's the advice to pork producers who feed finishing pigs a corn-soybean meal diet supplemented with microbial phytase instead of phosphorus.

"These producers should feed less calcium than the National Research Council recommends," said Trygve Veum, University of Missouri-Columbia animal scientist.

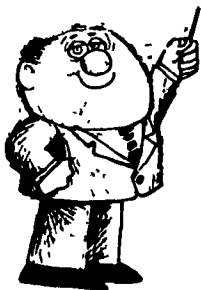

If the calcium to total phosphorus ratio in a finishing pig's diet is greater than 1.2 to 1, the calcium interferes with phosphorus absorption by the pig, Veum and Jiazhong Liu said in a report to the Midwest Section of the American Society of Animal Science.

Also, too much calcium can interfere with the enzyme action in microbial phytase, an enzyme producers use to help pigs get the phosphorus they need from a corn-soybean ration.

In their experiments, the MU scientists tested rations that compared calcium to phosphorus ratios of 1.5 to 1, 1.3 to 1, and 1 to 1. "At the lowest ratio, pigs increased intestinal absorption of both calcium and phosphorus," Veum said. "In other words, we improved the nutritional status of both elements."

Veum said the calcium requirement in finishing rations needs to be kept in line with the available phosphorus in the diet. "In low phosphorus diets where we are using microbial phosphate, it's necessary to lower the calcium to maintain a calcium to phosphorus ratio of less than 1.2 to 1," he said.

A Good Records Program Is Smart Option

ITHACA, N.Y. — More herds are seeing the value of a structured records program. So far this year Northeast DHIA has seen a growth of several thousand cows, the largest growth surge in recent history. "It is encouraging to see so many herd owners taking an active interest in good records," noted Director of Farm Services, Bill Hulslander. "Over the past several years we have worked hard to develop a system that offers more flexibility in testing options and provides more value on test day. I think producers are not beginning to realize that there is more to 'being on test' than official records."

The Northeast continues to remain a very strong dairy region. One feature of this area appears unique when compared to the rest of the country. That feature is the large variation in herd size. Herds in the Northeast range in size from 30 to 3000 cows. This variation means organizations like Northeast DHIA must offer products and services for all types of dairies. More flexibility and options provides something for everyone. Some producers use herd management software packages, some use electronic meters, some use both. Producers may now decide when to test, and how often to test. Component sampling may include fat, protein, somatic cell and milk urea nitrogen — in any combination. Testing may or may not include processing through DRPC Raleigh, and it may or may not include test day reports generated from Dairy Comp 305.

Many herd owners returning to DHI, or testing for the first time may be surprised to find just about any combination is available. "We are now in a much better position to provide members with customized services," notes Hulslander, "and the feedback from producers, along with the growth we are seeing, indicates that a good records program, as defined by the producer, is an important part of the success of the dairy enterprise."

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Dean Amick, Pa. DHIA director of field operations and a 43-year veteran of Pa. DHIA, recently released statistics that show the average time of tenure for 117 Pa. DHIA technicians is 14 years.

Dean energetically exclaimed, "This statistic is unique in the fact that Pa. DHIA provides services to members in high cow density areas as well as lower cow density areas. Providing high quality service at a reasonable price with highly trained employees continues to be top priority at Pa. DHIA."

Currently Pa. DHIA provides services to the members in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Ohio, West Virginia and Missouri.

Please feel free to contact Pa. DHIA at 1-800-344-8378 if we can assist with your dairy operation.

Forest Buffer

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Recognizing the increasing importance of riparian forest buffers as an environmental conservation strategy, the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service is offering two training workshops about riparian buffer systems.

The two-day sessions will be held May 7-8 at Chesapeake College and May 21-22 at the Carroll County Agricultural Center near Westminster.

The workshops are for Maryland resource managers such as foresters, wildlife biologists, extension agents, soil conservationists, FCA inspectors, and others who provide landowners and communities with technical resource information.

The first day of each workshop will feature a variety of classroom instructors and teaching techniques. The morning session will focus on "Ecology and Structure" and the afternoon session will feature discussions on "Establishment and Management."

The fieldwork portion of the workshop will consist of site assessment and case studies and will be taught by a multidisciplinary team that may include forestry professionals, wildlife biologists, soil and land conservationists, and an extension agent. Emphasis will be placed on practical information for assessment and developing management and team problem-solving strategies. Participants must attend the first day of the workshop to participate in the field exercise on the second.

Registration for each workshop begins at 8:30 a.m. on the first day and costs $25. For more information, call Bob Tjaden at the Wye Research and Education Center, (410) 827-8056.

Lebanon Earth Day Event Focuses On Achievements, Goals

porting Envirothon teams and competitions.

A local agency that depends on local, state and federal funding sources, the District also was given the responsibility of the county farmland preservation program, which until recently received limited support from county political leadership.

Wertz reported that the county commissioners have offered through their budgeting process $75,000 per year for farmland preservation for the past six years.

This year, the county will have more than $1 million to spend through matching state funds. The Conservation District wrote a federal grant proposal and was able to get the county a $100,000 federal grant to use toward getting state matching funds.

Wertz announced that the county preservation board recently approved beginning the process of making offers on the development easements on five farms totaling 580 acres.

If the development rights on those acres can be purchased with this year's funds, the county will bring its total preserved to 2,465 acres.

Wertz showed an overhead map of the county that was made using the county's Geographical Information System data base. The map showed how little the amount of land in the county is preserved, even with those five added.

There at least 18 farms on the waiting list for consideration, which would require at least three to four years to finance based on maintaining this year's augmented level of funding.

Wertz also showed a map of those municipalities that have adopted Agricultural Security Areas. While the majority of municipalities have adopted that precursor program to eligibility for farmland preservation, some of the municipalities have not, making farmland preservation impossible.

Wertz said that some municipalities, such as Jackson Township, were making progress. Jackson adopted an Agriculture Security Area, and more restrictive zoning that limits agricultural land to one house per 25 acres, instead of the typical 10 acres.

Wertz talked about the significant amount of farmland lost in Pennsylvania — the equivalent of Connecticut and Rhode Island — and he talked about the success of the farmland preservation program statewide, and how it serves as a model for the nation.

He said those who feel encouraged to take some action to helping the county's efforts can encourage commissioners to increase funding, or to organize some type of fundraising event and donate the money specifically to be used as seed money to get state matching funds.

Wertz said that it should be noted that one of the most active residential developers in the county has changed tactics from going after farmland and the last three developments have been in Lebanon on previously developed land.

However, Wertz said that agriculture needs to be better accounted for in the economic development plans for the county.

He said that his perception of the county's economic development plan, as it is communicated professionally and publicly, is devoid of any mention of agriculture. He said that's unfortunate since agriculture is the leading industry in the county.

It's not Hershey (Foods), it's not the VA (Veterans Administration Hospital).

He said that in 1995, agriculture and related industry employed 4,137 people in the 120,000 population county. It was the largest employer with $132,050,000 in sales and a payroll of $86.4 million.

Also, he said that people should consider this, plus the fact that agriculture does support many side businesses, such as bed and breakfasts which can work into local economic development plans.

"People don't come to this area to look at roads, strip malls and houses," Wertz said.

"We will have development in Lebanon County. We must have development, but it must be well conceived and not on the most productive soils."

Taylor, with the GLRA, talked about the facility and changes in policies, and challenges to handling the waste stream, such as controlling out-of-area flow and the demand for recyclables.

But he said that perhaps more of a challenge to the community is what to do with the material that does get landfilled, especially the toxics that are essentially sealed off from the elements, and in effect being preserved as a threat to future generations.

He said that the policies of land-filling are to control the moisture getting into the waste, so that groundwaters can be protected from landfill leachate.

However, that philosophy requires that material to be isolated from the environment forever, while the landfill facilities are only designed and bonded to last at most 30 years.

Eventually, he said, the system will fail, and the landfill material will escape into the environment and pose a health problem, it just won't be the problem of the adults alive today, it will be the problem of their children, or their grandchildren.

He said the GLRA is a model facility and is working to maintain its heritage of excellence and innovation in working to serve the community in the best way possible.

In other news, Jim Thorne, with the Nature Conservancy, talked about two species of concern in the Lebanon area.

He said that a somewhat rare butterfly species found at the Indiantown Gap Military Reservation represents the strongest population in the East and perhaps one of the strongest populations — about 2,000.

The Regal Fritillary butterfly requires habitat that is created at the military reservation through the fires that occur on the forested target areas.

An individual is being employed at the Gap to oversee the health of the butterfly population.

The Eastern Bog Turtle, and endangered species, is found near Lebanon, though it is not known to actually be in the county borders.

A small turtle that requires a habitat of grazed native wetland grasses may possibly show up in the county, and those who see one should report it. The areas where they are known to occur are protected and the species is to be left undisturbed.

They do carry a large ticket price on the black market, at about $2,000 a pair. Penalties for possession, not to mention selling, of the turtles are severe.

From the left, Bill Kurtz, head of the Lebanon County Planning Department, talks with John B. Wengert about a Rails-To-Trails project in the county.

State Sen. David Brightbill discussed the development of the legislation that allows companies to work with the state to reuse contaminated industrial sites and to improve them to the point where they don't pose a threat.

He said that the legislation was motivated on his part because of the problem in Lebanon city with a 40-acre abandoned Bethlehem Steel site that has contaminated soils.

The city spent about $1 million setting up an industrial park on the site, but had trouble attracting any businesses, since they and their lenders were leary of opening themselves up to potentially huge liabilities for the cleanup of the properties.

However, Brightbill said that after talking with other senators, especially from Pittsburgh, he discovered that Lebanon's problem was small in comparison.

He said that in Pittsburgh, they had a 2,000-acre site that faced the same fate as an untouchable property because of environmental cleanup liabilities.

Wertz said the coalition that sponsored the Earth Day event hasn't set any specific plans yet for a repeat progress report.

The group intends to meet in a couple of weeks to review the program and make plans for next year.

Anyone interested in supporting the program can call Wertz at (717) 272-3377.

Farmers Union Pleased With 12-Month Extension

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board approved a 12-month extension to the current overorder premium paid to dairy producers.

"This is a big win for dairy producers in our state," said Pennsylvania Farmers Union President Robert Junk. "Our organization was out front in pushing for the extension and we are very pleased the PMMB agreed with us."

Junk testified before the PMMB April 9. He said, "Dairy farmers have suffered this winter, and we can't take another hit. The wholesale price paid to farmers in February 1997 was $13.90. A year ago, in February 1996, it was $14.70. That's an 80-cent drop in the price paid to farmers."

Pennsylvania Farmers Union advocated a 12-month extension of the current 80-cent overorder premium price per hundred-weight. "The overorder premium has been an asset for producers and an extension is necessary,"

Junk said. "Twelve months is the only natural extension because it will give producers a real opportunity to assess the impact of their crops for 1997 and how it effects their cost of production for milk."

"Our organization worked hard to provide evidence showing the market can handle an 80-cent overorder premium," he said. "The premium will provide some relief to the economic stress that family dairy farmers have been experiencing. We realize this action is not the saving grace for producers, but it does provide some relief."

Farm Bureau Delighted With PMMB Decision

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — A spokesman for the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) said the organization is "delighted" with the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board's (PMMB) decision to extend the current overorder price for milk for one year.

"We're delighted that the board has decided to maintain the overorder price level for the next 12 months," said Joel Rotz, PFB's dairy specialist. PFB had requested that the current overorder price level be extended for at least the next six months during a hearing held on April 9.

Without PMMB's action the overorder price for Class I milk produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania would have dropped from 80 cents per hundredweight (cwt.) of milk to 50 cents after April 30. At the April 9 hearing, PFB presented testimony showing the typical dairy producer was losing money because of high production costs and low prices during the past year. Milk prices at the farm underwent a record plunge this past winter.

The three-member board unanimously approved extending the current 80 cents premium level until May 1, 1998. At that time it will revert to a 50 cents/cwt. level. In making its decision, the board reserved the right to reconsider the overorder level during the coming 12 months if conditions change.

"The board's 12-month extension of the 80 cents premium should be helpful to many Pennsylvania dairymen," Rotz said. "And indirectly, it will hopefully help all Pennsylvania producers in maintaining voluntary premiums in the region."

Noting that the PMMB's decision came just nine days after the hearing which was held at PFB's request, Rotz said, "We appreciate the board's promptness in addressing our concerns. Now we can maintain the overorder premium without interruption. Without swift board action, it would have fallen by nearly 40 percent at the end of this month."

PFB's recommendation to the board to extend the current overorder price level had been echoed by other farm organizations and dairy cooperatives and did not meet with any opposition during the April 9 hearing. "It was good to see the industry united in the interests of dairy farmers in this crisis," said Rotz.

Extending Functional Longevity In Dairy Cows

GREG PALEN
Michigan Livestock Service, Inc.
Netherhall Dairy

OTTER LAKE, Mich. — There was a time when 100,000 pounds lifetime production was a selling point in a pedigree . . . Then, as herd averages progressed, it took "200,000 pounds" to get a Breeder's attention. Suddenly, the commercial A.I. industry's "index game" took over Holstein breeding, and only the first lactation performance seemed to be meaningful for establishing a marketing value (in fact the purist among population Geneticists will only consider the first 90 days of first lactation as devoid of management bias!) . . . but the economics of dairying are forcing us to recognize herd turnover — the cost of replacements to maintain milking herd size and yield improvement — as our third largest cost (behind "feed" and "labor") to produce milk today.

With national DHIA system data suggesting the average USA dairy cow is only productive for 2.4 lactations before culled (a more or less constant statistic over the last 10 years, or three "cow generations") it is clear that even the 1960's era pedigree standard of "100,000 pounds" Lifetime has not been achieved commercially by the customers of the purebred Breeders and the commercial AI industry especially. Is there a reason that functional longevity of milk production still eludes us, even after the millions that have been invested in AI sire sampling and Genetic evaluation fine-tuning?

Loren Ludwig of Sky Light Farms, Otter Lake, Michigan, thinks there is a simple reason — and he has been collecting the data to back it up, while concentrating his purebred Holstein breeding focus around a unique Michigan cow family, the "TRIXIE's" of Jack Kaufman's "Thumb Pride" herd at Sandusky, Michigan. Loren says genetic selection is actually pretty simple: if you want to breed "Show Cows," select service sires from successfully-shown Dams who are siring show winners . . . if you want to breed "Index Cows," select as service sires among the top-ranking indexed AI sires . . . but if you want to improve longevity, select service sires from Cows with long life and higher lifetime production records, as he has done from the "Trixie" cow family.

So who is "Trixie," anyway? CIROSE THUMB PRIDE TRIXIE was a cow of note to Michigan Holstein breeders in the early 1980s, after she crossed the "Rubicon" of 300,000 pounds Lifetime production (her final credits completed under Loren Ludwig's management were 354,000 pounds). In fact, this is a record only exceeded by one cow born before 1970 — the "Patsy" cow of Gelbke Brothers in Ohio, whose remarkable lifetime of 420,000 pounds was only just approached recently by another iron Grandma in New York born over 20 years later. According to Holstein Association USA performance files, only 97 cows, born since 1970, have completed verified (DHIR) lifetimes exceeding 300,000 pound Lifetime production. Prior to "TRIXIE" (who was born in 1968) there were so few that I am sure many Breeders of that era found such totals "suspect." But Jack Kaufman's neighbors believed it, because many of them were already benefiting from Jack's production-focused Breeding program through his bulls and surplus replacements.

Let's put it in today's terms. What is the "expected" lifetime total for a "modern" cow in the best managed herds? Maybe 20,000 in that first lactation, as much as 30,000 in a second lactation, with perhaps 15,000 left to get in a fractional third lactation before the inevitable culling day — 65,000 pounds total. This kind of performance will sustain a rolling herd average in the 25,000-pound range, but the lack of "herdlife" means there is a constant consumption of all replacement heifers raised. You spend $1,200 or more to raise a cow; milk her 2½ years; then sell her for at best $400 salvage. Your "turnover" cost is $800 per cow on 65,000 pounds of milk, or $1.20 per cwt. If you are obtaining exceptional levels of production; at national average production levels, the "turnover" cost is closer to $2 per cwt! How would it compare to a herd of "TRIXIE's"??

It has long been recognized that, even under large herd corral confinement management as practiced in California, individual cows will perform to 15 years of age. A dozen calvings, averaging 20,000 pounds or more per lactation will generate around 250,000 pounds Lifetime milk production, plus a half-dozen heifers to raise that may replicate Mama's performance. In Loren's thinking, you get a double pay back from selection for Longevity — more Milk PLUS more calves!! In fact, statistically, it takes a minimum 2.7 lactations per cow to maintain herd size without purchasing replacements, given the two-year rearing time. No matter how much you increase per-cow production on a lactation average basis, you will not improve replacement availability or selection culling potential if you do not improve on the average "stayability" of cows in the herd.

Visiting with Jack Kaufman, now retired (his son Dale owns the "Lamar" cow and milks 45 cows, most of them descended from his Dad's Thumb-Pride herd), but still very interested in Holstein breeding, you pick up some clues to the success of the "TRIXIE" family beyond what was contributed by the outstanding herdsman for which Jack was noted. He cannot recall a single instance of clinical mastitis treatment in this family; they were not prone to ketosis or related metabolic disorders, always having healthy appetites; there was an outstanding fertility record. (Perhaps "fertility" is a primary selection criteria to achieve Longevity; in fact, the year Jack couldn't get "TRIXIE" bred right back as an older cow is the way the Ludwigs were able to acquire her, initiating an embryo transfer program to expand her influence in their herd as Jack shifted his focus to younger cows.) Given the mating that produced "TRIXIE" occurred 30 years ago, you also have a concentration of traditional "Longevity" Holstein bloodlines that is difficult to duplicate from most "high index" families today.

Sire — Thonyma Lucky Mose (¾ brother to the sire of Paclamar Astronaut) Dam's Sire — Osbornedale Admiral Lucifer (maternal brother to Osbornedale Ivanhoe, his sire, Lauxmont Admiral Lucifer, lived to be 18 years old) Grandam's Sire — Budd Farm Lauxmont Master (from the same "Admiral" blood used at Dunloggin, his dam was Dunloggin Duchess Anna, who lived to be 16).

Why is there not more emphasis on the heritability of Longevity? We can only speculate on reasons, but one of the primary problems is the belief that selection for "plus Type" fulfills our need for functional herdlives. In fact, recent data released by Holstein Association shows a positive correlation between a cow's classification grade and her expected Lifetime totals; most cows over 300,000 pounds are scored at least "Very Good," and most cows over 200,000 pounds are scored at least "Good Plus" (a minimum of 85 and 80 points on a scale of 100), compared to Breed Average of 77 points for all cows classified. While cow performance for Longevity is related to actual score levels of 80 points or higher, current Sire evaluation methods using linear comparisons against unrelated herdmate's allow "plus" Type ratings for sires even if their average of actual scores is well below the 77 point "average" for the Breed. (It is interesting to note that, when Jack Kaufman chose to use Thonyma Lucky Mose in his herd, he was "Breeder-proven" and had an 84-point actual average on his scored daughters!)

"TRIXIE" herself scored Very Good at 87 points in her maturity, a significant improvement over a dam who, while obviously productive, was not a "modern" type cow and had only 78 points the one time she was scored (as an older cow, when Jack first scored). Today's classifiers would criticize "TRIXIE" and "PEARL" as not angular or tall enough to score higher — but they have assigned 88 points to "Bovadeere" and 90 points to "Lamar" so the correlation between actual Type and potential Lifetime performance is consistent in this family.

It is perhaps relevant to recognize that Biological scientists working in other species (all the way from flies to mice to rats to monkeys to humans) see a volume of research data to suggest that Longevity of Life is heritable; if you select from long-lived mates, you breed a longer living offspring within any of the species that have been studied. In nature, bovines have a proven life expectancy of 20 years, with individuals approaching 30 years. Commercially managed dairy cows, by contrast, are dying on the average at 54 months of age — a year short of their physiological maturity (estimated at 66 months by USDA's AIPL researchers). The "TRIXIEs" who perform admirable through 10 calvings and produce milk to 15 years of age are out there, and are capable of breeding on that ability — but have not been given many recent opportunities in commercial AI sire sampling programs, as the selection focus remains on the "Index" formulas that emphasize high-first lactation performance.

What makes "TRIXIE" so special in the minds of those who have heard Loren Ludwig's story? She TRANSMITS her Longevity, as part of what Loren's father [Don Ludwig, a former Ayrshire Breeder] calls the "Million Pound Cow Family".

HACCP Ramifications Still Unclear, Yet Processors, Packers See Added Responsibilities

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Food animal processors and packers realize greater responsibility for producing safe food through the recent Pathogen Reduction and Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Point (HACCP) rule.

This was the consensus of government and industry representatives at the Conference on Animal Production Food Safety held in conjunction with the Livestock Conservation Institute's (LCI) 81st Annual Meeting.

While USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) has no regulatory authority at the animal production level, producers will likely share this responsibility, they said.

"I don't think there's a question that HACCP will impact producers, the question is how and when," said Mike Smith of the National Cattleman's Beef Association.

FSIS Administrator Thomas Billy overviewed the HACCP regulation with meeting attendees. "The final rule provides a framework for significantly improving food safety," Billy said.

As processing and packing plants implement HACCP, he said plants will expect more information from producers.

"We believe that those involved in each segment of farm-to-table, from animal producers to retailers and consumers, bear responsibility for identifying and preventing or reducing food safety hazards under their operational control."

As the regulations are in various implementation stages, Dr. H. Fred Trout, professor and head of veterinary clinical medicine at the University of Illinois, believes there is a need for additional research, as there is no evidence linking pathogens in live animals to pathogens on the finished product. He said incentives will have to reinforce voluntary quality assurance throughout the production community, and producers would likely ensure proper practices to maintain market access. In a seminar addressing the impact of HACCP programs on food animal production, industry groups agreed.

"Food safety is a public health issue that directly affects marketing," said Paul Sundberg, National Pork Producers Council director of veterinary issues. "We have to be able to maintain consumer confidence."

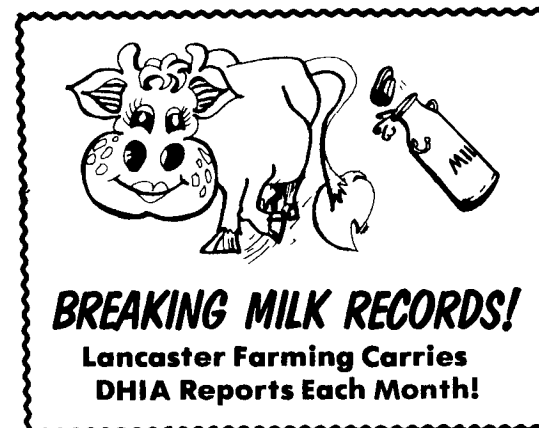

"Slaughter facilities will be looking for ways to certify that animals have been handled in such a way to prevent or diminish contaminants," said Jim Hodges of the American Meat Institute. He does not believe that packers will discriminate on the size of the producer, unless it's competitive to do so.

Billy, however, believes that smaller producers will need help competing in a HACCP-based environment. "We recognize that small producers have special needs, and we are interested in finding ways to assist them in adopting industry standards and maintaining profitable operations as HACCP is implemented in plants," Billy said.

While efforts and strides are being made industry-wide, Dr. Michael Blackwell, chief veterinarian of the United States Public Health Service and Deputy Director of the FDA Center for Veterinary Medicine, reinforced the need to continue improvement. "Let us not be complacent with the knowledge that ours is the safest food supply in the world. We can and we must do better," he said.

Dairy Research Shows Product Reduces Mastitis

DES MOINES, Iowa — A dip that provides a protective coating to dairy cows' mammary glands reduced infections at calving by 50 percent in Iowa State University (ISU) research trials.

The teat dip was developed by Leo Timms, an associate professor of animal science at ISU, and Carl Huprich, an Alabama expert in industrial polymers and plastics. Timms presented results of the research at the Midwest meetings of the American Society of Animal Science and American Dairy Science Association recently.

Mastitis, a disease caused most often by infection of a cow's mammary gland, is the dairy industry's costliest problem — an estimated $2 billion a year.

"Fifty percent of mastitis occurs during the first and last week of the dry period when the animal is not being milked," said Timms. "During those times, current mastitis treatment strategies, including antibiotics, can be ineffective and expensive, and may create the potential for residues in milk if not used and monitored properly, especially prior to calving."

Most dry-period mastitis research has focused on trying to control bacteria once it is in the gland, rather than simply keeping bacteria out, Timms said. "Our goal was to develop a teat dip that would stay on long enough to prevent infections, while doing no harm to the animal or the milk supply."

After testing hundreds of compounds and formulations, Timms and Huprich came up with a teat dip that dries to form a flexible barrier. "This layer breathes, but is impermeable to bacteria, water and wind. It's stable in different temperatures, doesn't tear and doesn't irritate the animal," Timms said.

Trials were conducted on 410 cows in research trials at ISU and in Louisiana and Canada. The teat dip was applied the week after milking stopped and the week before the cows calved. Two teats on each cow were treated, the other two weren't. In the ISU trials, dipped teats showed a 50 percent reduction in infections at calving compared to undipped ones. The barrier stayed on the cows for three to seven days.

More trials are ongoing with other formulations, including those containing a germicide and a brighter color to make the barrier easier to detect. Researchers also are working to make the dip stay on the cows longer.

Patents are pending on the product, which has been licensed to a company and could be on the market this spring.

Appetite May Be Clue That Leads Researchers To Faster Growing, More Efficient Pigs

DES MOINES, Iowa — Appetite is one clue that Oklahoma State University (OSU) researchers are using to find genes for pigs that grow faster and more efficiently.

The researchers developed a breeding program to select two genetic lines of pigs: one line that grew rapidly and one that grew slowly. "Over 10 generations, average daily gain was the only criterion in making the selections for breeding. Looking at the differences between those lines helps us narrow in on the specific genes that control appetite and feed efficiency," said Archie Clutter, an OSU swine geneticist.

They found that the biggest factor in the growth of those pigs was appetite as reflected in their feed intake. Pigs in the slow-growing line had higher levels of a hormone in their bloodstream that triggered their feeling of fullness. They also found that those pigs were more sensitive to that hormone than their fast-growing counterparts. Clutter outlined the research for scientists gathered for the joint Midwest meeting of the American Society of Animal Science and the American Dairy Science Association in Des Moines recently.

"As we selected pigs for these traits, we changed the frequency of some of the genes involved," Clutter explained. "We want to know the location of those genes and what else we'll change when we select for increased average daily gain."

So far, the researchers found that selecting for average daily gain alone had little effect on feed and leg soundness. As researchers expected, fast-growing pigs were somewhat fatter, Clutter said.

The OSU researchers are working with colleagues at the University of Wisconsin to identify genetic markers for appetite. Markers are detectable chunks of DNA from chromosomes that can be used to indicate the presence of important genes on that chromosome.

"Appetite, or feed intake, of individual pigs is difficult and expensive to measure," Clutter said. "Using genetic markers to help guide selection in breeding programs could be more cost effective."

Pennsylvania Farm Women President Designates Acts Of Kindness

LOU ANN GOOD
PORTAGE (Cambria Co.) —

With energy, enthusiasm, and an impressive track record of accomplishments, Lois Hughes appears to be the perfect president to lead the 2,750 members of the Society of Farm Women of Pennsylvania.

As a member who has filled numerous offices in the organization during the past 41 years, Lois has a working knowledge of the importance of the organization and the direction it should take.

"Belonging to Farm Women rates up there after family, church, and community," she said.

During her three-year term as president, Lois has defined her theme to concentrate on "Acts of Kindness."

"During the first year of my term, each individual member is encouraged to do an act of kindness anonymously except to tell the president of her society about 'her act of kindness.'"

The society presidents will compile a listing of the acts while maintaining the anonymity of the "doer." Participants will receive a participation certificate at the end of the year.

During the second year of Lois' term, the county societies will be encouraged to select a project and work together helping a person or organization that is often overlooked.

During Lois' third and final year of leadership, the state will select a project that requires acts of kindness to be fulfilled by the membership. This expression is to go without pay or recognition.

Lois' confidence in the "acts of kindness" philosophy evolves from her own impressions of how people have influenced her life.

She refers to a quote that sums up the importance of kindness and how it can better the lives of others: "When I think of you, I think of how you saw something in me that others overlooked, and how you took the time to get to know me and to give me a chance."

She credits Farm Women for giving her the opportunity to develop leadership skills.

Lois became a member of one of Cambria County's four Farm Women societies when she married beef and grain farmer Isaac (Ike) Hughes.

"My mother-in-law invited me," she said.

The big incentive for joining this active organization founded for Farm Women in 1914 was the opportunity "to get away from the children for one day a month," Lois admitted with a hearty laugh. "I enjoyed the social fellowship and the fun of working together."

The Hughes had six children, all of whom became active in 4-H.

"There were times when I needed to take them to three different 4-H meetings in one day," Lois said. "They had chores and I had work to do, but we made 4-H a priority in our lives."

Those early years in 4-H have had lasting repercussions on the children's lives. Two of her children are now extension agents, one is a home economics teacher, another is affiliated with an agricultural business, and another daughter and her husband have taken over the family farm.

Lois is a staunch believer in the 4-H adage, "Learn by doing."

She is a prime example of one who perfected her skills without the help of a college education. She became so adept at sewing that not only did she sew all her family's clothing, including men's sport jackets, but also served as a 4-H sewing leader and taught clothing construction for adult evening classes at the Ebensburg High School.

"It was really the extension who encouraged me in teaching sewing," said Lois. And the more she taught, the more confident she became.

No doubt, Lois' continual involvement in 4-H while raising six children enabled extension leaders to see Lois' potential for leadership. She was selected as an organizational leader for the South Central 4-H Club and served on the Cambria County Cooperative Extension executive board, the family living advisory board, the central region family living program development committee, and on regional and state boards.

Lois' success in teaching design, clothing construction, and quilting classes to 4-H'ers resulted in an honorary award by the Pennsylvania Association Extension Home Economists and a Nittany Lion Award.

After serving as a 4-H leader for 20 years, Lois no longer teaches her own class but she does support 4-H by judging and offering assistance at special events.

The Cambria County Fair is another area where Lois devotes time and energy. She is the superintendent for the agriculture building on the fairgrounds. For 20 years, she supervised eight department heads, filled out about 5,000 entry tags, organized exhibit displays, and secured judges.

Because of her affiliation with the local fair, Lois is often asked to judge clothing and needlework competitions at other fairs, the Pennsylvania Grange, and at women's clubs, and 4-H contests.

When the Hughes' children were in school, Lois served as PTA president, homeroom mother, chaperone, and volunteer.

Every July 4 for more than 25 years, about 140 members of the Hughes clan gathers at the Hughes homestead. Not only are their many details to attend to before the gathering, but with so many people, the daily cleanup and serving of food is monumental.

Out of curiosity derived from questions at the reunion, Lois compiled a history and genealogy of the Elmer and Emma Hughes family. She also served as the South Ebensburg Welsh Heritage Society.

Church has always played a large role in Lois' life. She is a 44-year member of South Ebensburg United Church of Christ, where she has served as Sunday school teacher, vacation Bible school teacher, choir, secretary, financial secretary, altar and flower chairperson, pulpit search committee, deaconess, conference delegate, and now treasurer.

With devoting so much time to others, it is not surprising that in 1970 Lois was selected Pennsylvania Farm Woman of the Year after competing at local, county, and state levels. The selection was based on her involvement not only with Farm Women but with community and family.

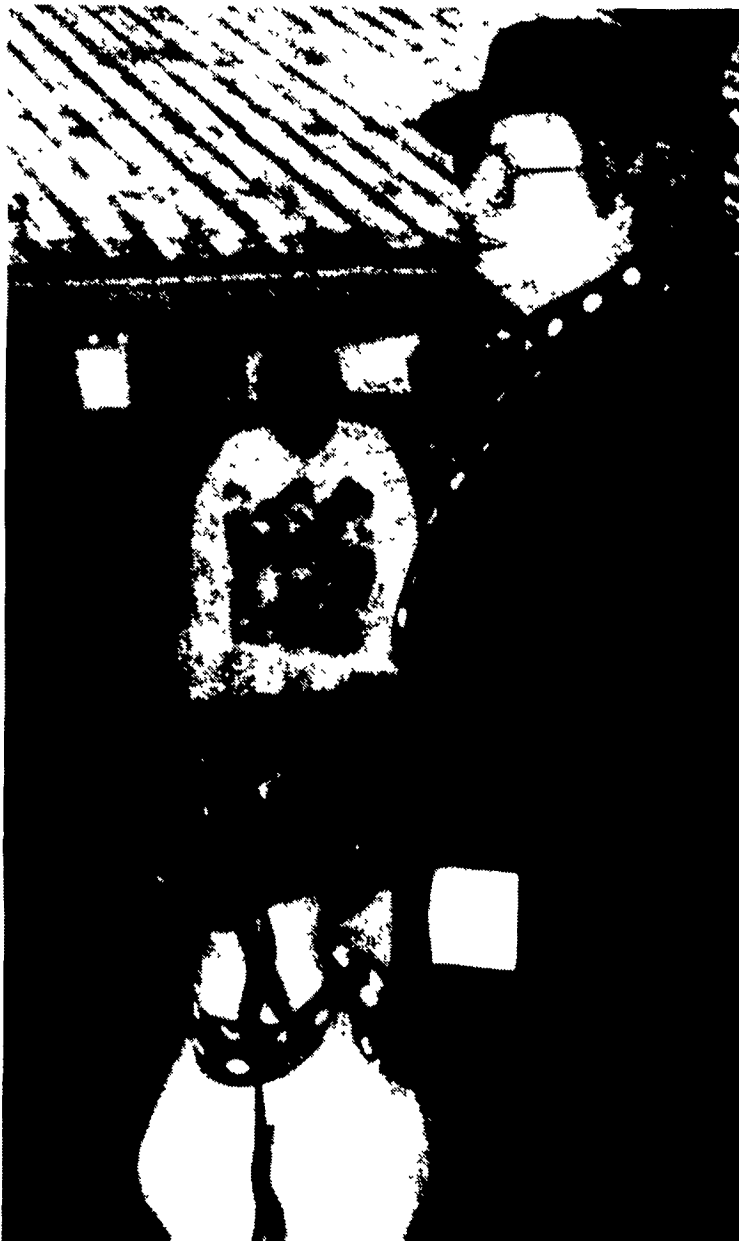

From Lois' perspective, the Farm Women organization has changed in her 41-year tenure.

"We are more like a service organization. We do more charity work and less serving at such

(Turn to Page B3)

It's hard to believe that Lois Hughes finds time to complete 3-D jigsaw puzzles in between leadership responsibilities with Farm Women, extension, the community fair, and church.

Her sewing skills garner points for Lois in the adult class of sheep leadline competition at the Cambria Fair.

The Hughes' farmhouse in Portage, Cambria County, has been renovated both inside and out and is often filled with relatives and guests.

things as farm sale luncheons," she said.

During her tenure as president, Lois is also working on a plan to spur membership in the Farm Women Societies. "I have a contest planned that offers monetary awards," she said of the plan that soon will be unveiled to members.

"I'd also like to set up a memorial service pattern that could be adapted for use whenever needed by individual societies," she said.

Although she has pursued multi-interests, Lois said that raising a family has brought the most satisfaction to her.

With 11 grandchildren ranging between the ages of three and 17, Lois said things haven't slowed down for her. "The grandchildren are always here."

In addition, she continues to sew her own wardrobe. "I have two outfits waiting for the final finishing touches," Lois said. In her spare time Lois enjoys needlework, putting together 3-D jigsaw puzzles, and traveling.

"One thing that I would change if I had the opportunity to live life over would be to get a college education," Lois said. "I wanted to be an interior decorator — especially dressing store windows."

To the many people who question Lois' boundless energy, she answers, "I live one day at a time. I'm a person who never seems to have a down time. I'm very healthy."

Family is important to Lois Hughes. This family clan gathers at the Hughes farm every July 4 for a reunion.

American Agri-Women To Meet National Legislators

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

No one thought it would last this long.

But the race continues. And we watch with anticipation to see which will win — the weather or the woodpile?

This year, we were prepared. Having battled occasional stretches of having our porch woodpile run low, while deep snow covered the backup supplies in the woods and fencerows, the porchful of wood was comforting insurance that ushered in the new year.

It truly was a porchful of wood, too. Courtesy, in part, to our son-in-law. Even before their arrival for an extended visit over the Christmas holidays, he was anticipating a chance to cut wood. He's a teacher by profession, but an outdoorsman by avocation. Being out in the brisk, fresh air and using his physical skills is sometimes a welcome antidote to the confinement of classroom walls.

So, he and The Farmer spent a couple of late December afternoons sawing up the considerable trimmings from the edges of woodlots and fencerows encroaching onto crop ground. Most of the trimming was done a year ago, when repeated chain saw attacks on the tree volunteers yielded plentiful future fodder for the woodstove. Some of the victims had also yielded a clear, runny, sweet liquid that we boiled — for hours and hours — down into a small amount of maple syrup.

In the ensuing months, the dropped trees lost all traces of fresh sap as they dried down toward their ultimate end of providing us with wintertime warmth. They continued to serve nature, as birds perched in them during the summer and chipmunks and squirrels scampered through their clutter. Field mice found under them a haven from the scanning, sharp eyes of redtail hawks and the rodent-loving red foxes that prowl the meadows and fencerows.

After nearly a year of dry-down time, the assorted lengths of tree trunks and large limbs yielded up easily to the whining bite of the chain saw, slicing them neatly into pieces to fit the yawning belly of the woodstove. Repeatedly, truckloads of the lengths backed into the yard, followed by the steady bumping sounds of unloading and stacking the firewood onto the basement porch. Its concrete floor and sheltering ceiling, the floor of the upstairs porch, would keep the wood dry and ready for use.

Heading to the barn after the last load had been stacked, I was overwhelmed by the volume of wood. It towered over my head, solid stacks on both side of the basement door. Wood blocked shut each of the windows on opposite sides of the center door. Just a narrow path through remained, barely wide enough to open the door. Cords and cords of firewood awaited our use, a treasure trove of fuel supply at our immediate fingertips.

About late January, with the mild winter we were enjoying, we speculated that the woodpile would last well beyond this heating season's needs. I wondered where we would go with the excess for the summer, since the adjacent woodshed already held nearly another year's supply.

Every few days, we would refill the "wood truck" that The Farmer had built a few winters ago, a pipe frame with wheels under it which holds about two-cold-days-worth of firewood. Almost imperceptibly, the stash diminished. By late January, daylight was peeking through the porch's east window. Occasionally, one would move a few pieces of wood, and a good part of the pile behind it would tumble to your feet — onto your feet once in a while. (I figured that sooner or later a piece would go through a window, but that never happened.)

Wildlife continued to enjoy the wood stash. Sparrows took shelter on protruding ends of firewood while waiting their turns at the feeder. Our backyard squirrels scampered over the pile. One morning weeks ago, we spied our Canada goose pair scanning the diminishing woodpile, as though considering it for a nest site. Even Monk, the housecat, perched on it occasionally to bask in the morning sunshine.

By mid-March, the west basement window was readmitting the light of day into the basement. And, with the ongoing chill and continuing brisk winds of April, the pile has rapidly dwindled. Just a fraction in one corner remains, just enough to carry us into the warmth of May.

The woodpile has been a gift of warmth and convenience for these past many months, for which we are grateful.

Getting Records Organized For 1998 Tax Year

Income tax time is over and I've found many people frustrated because they couldn't find certain important records that would have helped them itemize their expenses or prove their contributions, etc.

Was this a problem in your household? If it was, here are some tips to help you organize your records for 1997 and you'll breeze through tax time in 1998.

For Your Active Records

Establish a record keeping system as simple as using a shoe box as your life. It's very compact and easy to use. It certainly saves on the expense of a filing cabinet and doesn't take up much room.

In your shoe box, place some envelopes (legal size works best) and label them as follows:

• Mortgage/rent, electric, gas heat, water, trash, telephone, credit card(s), contributions, taxes, etc. Label an envelope for each kind of expense that you have. In the envelopes you will place statements, payment receipts, tax information, etc. regarding those expenses.

I'm not suggesting that you keep money in the envelopes — just expense records/statements, etc. When it's time to do your taxes, just take your box with you — everything will be at your fingertips. All the stress you might be feeling now will not be there — I guarantee it!

• January, February, March, April, etc. Put these envelopes towards the back of your box. In these envelopes you will keep everyday grocery store, gas, department store, etc. receipts. These receipts help you track spending, so that if you're trying to save money and there doesn't seem to be any — this might be the place to look.

Spending habits show up when you're trying to keep some kind of record. This is another organization technique that really helps to make a difference in the way you plan your spending and, therefore, stretch your paycheck further.

For Your Permanent Records

Another area that needs organization in many homes are the more permanent, very important papers such as birth certificates, car titles, and military records. These important records should be kept in a home safe or a safe deposit box at the local bank.

If you need assistance getting this kind of information together, a booklet entitled "Getting Organized" can be helpful to you. "Getting Organized" is a 48-page bound workbook with current information and easy-to-complete forms designed to help keep tabs on the many parts of personal and financial matters. Some of the records in "Getting Organized" summarize, so playing "hide-and-sort" through a lot of records to come up with figures or information isn't necessary.

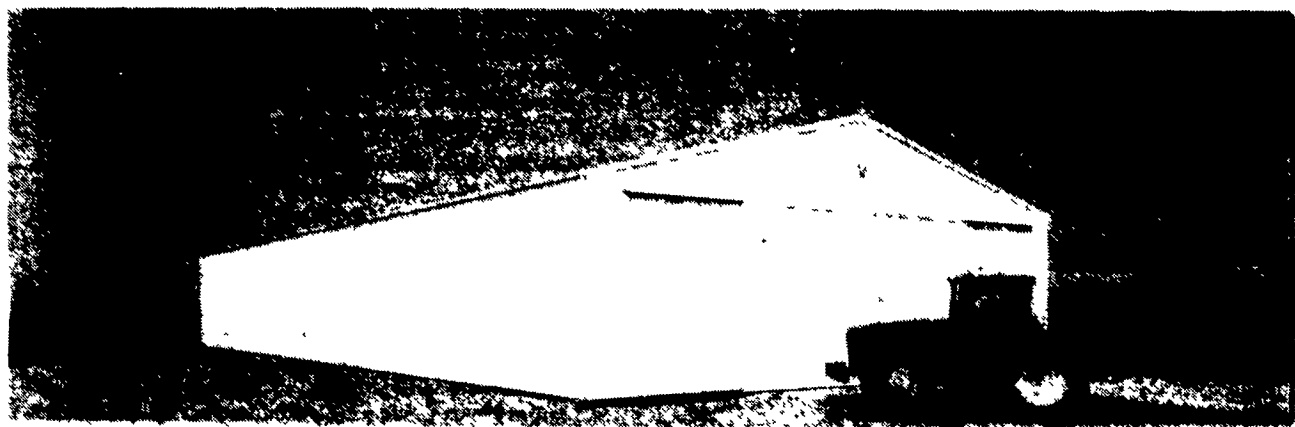

Some records measure financial progress or the value of household possessions. Simple retrievable lists save tears, time, trouble, and dollars. Guidelines at the beginning of the booklet spell out where and how long to keep records, and identify the important papers. Fill-in forms concern the information that is important to keep on vehicles, real estate improvements, investments, insurance, inventories and financial records (credit cards, taxes paid, etc.). Forms also highlight the essential information that must be included and if the form needs safekeeping in a safe deposit box. They're easy to complete and the decisions of what to include, where to keep it, etc., have already been made.

This very valuable booklet, "Getting Organized," can be obtained from your local county cooperative extension office for $3.

Home on the Range

Ethnic Dishes Create National Flavor

Most Americans' diets are ethnic based. But with recipes handed down from generation to generation and from neighbor to friend, the roots of where the food first originated become vague.

Since Americans are a mobile society, they pick up recipes from other areas and include them in their repertoire of recipes.

International traveling introduces Americans to a whole new way of eating. And they usually love it. This no doubt accounts for the many new ethnic dishes served in more and more restaurants.

Some dishes are distinctively Mexican or Italian, but some are much harder to identify. In fact, some of the recipes from our readers are not identified as to which country they originated. Regardless of where these recipes are from, enjoy!

TOMATO PUDDING

28-ounce can tomatoes
3 or 4 slices dry bread
½ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup butter, melted
1 teaspoon freshly grated black pepper

Pinch salt

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Combine tomatoes, bread, sugar, butter, pepper, and salt. Mix well with hands, breaking up the tomatoes. Transfer to a one-quart casserole dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Serves 4-6.

B. Light Lebanon

INDIAN PUDDING

1 quart milk
¼ cup molasses
¼ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup sour milk or cream
½ cup butter
4 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup cornmeal

Scald milk and slowly stir in corn meal. Remove from heat and add all ingredients except sour cream. Mix well, then add sour cream and beat well. Turn into buttered casserole and bake at 275 degrees for two hours. Serve hot or cold, plain or with cream or plain pudding sauce.

G. Minckler

SMOTHERED CABBAGE

5 slices bacon or salt pork
1 head cabbage, chopped
1 tablespoon cider vinegar
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon black pepper

In a large skillet, fry bacon until crisp. Remove, drain, and crumble.

Add cabbage to skillet with bacon drippings, a little at a time. Allow to wilt after each addition. Add vinegar, sugar, and pepper. Stir, cover, and cook about 20 minutes or until soft. Stir in crumbled bacon just before serving. 4-6 servings.

Featured Recipe

Another trendy food with ethnic roots is biscotti. These Italian twice-baked cookies are served with coffee and are great for dunking.

This recipe is shared by Alletta Schadler, Lebanon County extension director, who said the recipe is from In Julia's Kitchen With Master Chefs by Julia Child.

This biscotti recipe features orange oil, but you can try different flavors. Citrus oils are available in orange, lemon, and lime flavors from food catalogs and cooking shops. The oils produce a long-lasting intense flavor.

If you don't have orange oil, increase the amount of orange zest. Zest is the colored outer rind of citrus. Use a zester that shaves strips of peel or peel off the rind without getting the white underlayer, then cut in fine shreds with a knife or chop fine or grate the rind.

ORANGE WALNUT BISCOTTI

¾ cups all-purpose flour
2 cups walnut pieces (big)
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
3 large eggs
1½ cups sugar
2 tablespoons lemon zest
2 tablespoons orange zest
1 teaspoon pure orange oil
1 stick unsalted butter, melted

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line a jellyroll pan with parchment to fit the pan exactly.

Blend flour, walnuts, baking powder, and baking soda in large bowl until nuts are mixed evenly. Set aside. Break 2 large eggs into a 2 or 3-quart bowl. Separate third egg, placing yolk with the other eggs and the white in a smaller dish for later use.

Whisk eggs; add sugar, zests, and oil. Gradually whisk in melted butter. When well blended pour into flour mixture. Fold and push all ingredients together until the liquid is absorbed and the dry ingredients have been completely incorporated. Empty bowl onto a floured work surface and knead and squeeze it into a stiff, doughy mass.

Divide dough in half and roll and press to form log 14 inches long. Press ends to keep neat. Lift onto parchment-lined pan and press top slightly to flatten to make oval log. Repeat with other log. Place alongside the first. Beat reserved egg white until smooth. Brush lightly over logs.

Bake at 350 degrees until light brown but still gives when pressed on top, about 30 minutes. Remove from oven and reduce temperature to 325 degrees. Let logs cool on pan for 15 minutes.

One at a time, remove logs to board and cut them into ½ -inch slices with a very sharp knife. Slice diagonally—the classic biscotti shape. Lay slices on their side on the sheet and return the sheet to the oven. Bake until cookies are light brown, about 15 minutes. Cool on wire racks. When completely cool, store in airtight container. Will keep for weeks... if you hide them.

May dip one end into melted chocolate if you want to be decadent.

MOROCCAN ROLLUPS

1 pound boneless leg of lamb or chicken, cubed
½ cup minced sweet onions
2 teaspoons ground cumin
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cayenne
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons olive oil
5 pita breads (6 or 7-inch)
1 cup grated cheese
1 cup crumbled feta cheese
½ cup chopped ripe olives
½ cup chopped tomatoes
Yogurt sauce

Combine meat, onion, spices, and salt. Heat oil in large skillet, add meat mixture and cook over medium-high heat about 10 minutes (5 to 8 for chicken) until cooked through. To assemble, split each pita at edges to get two (6 or 7-inch) rounds. Place them with insides facing up on the counter. Sprinkle rounds with cheeses, olives, and tomatoes. Spoon strip of sauteed lamb across each round. Roll pita round tightly around filling and place seam-side down in baking dish. Bake in 400-degree oven 10 minutes or until crispy. Serve with yogurt sauce. Makes 10 rollups.

Yogurt Sauce: 1 cup lowfat plain yogurt with 1 tablespoon chopped mint and ½ cup chopped cucumber. Makes 1½ cups.

SPANISH HACIENDA PORK WRAP

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 pound boneless pork loin, finely cubed
2 cups chopped sweet onions
1 cup green or red chile salsa
½ cup chopped ripe olives
2 teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon ground cumin
Hot sauce to taste
1½ cups hot cooked rice
4 burrito-size flour tortillas, steamed

1 cup shredded cheese
Heat 1 tablespoon oil in large skillet and saute half the pork and onion over high heat until browned; remove from pan. Repeat with remaining oil, pork and onion; remove from pan. Combine salsa, olives, chili powder, cornstarch, sugar, and cumin in skillet. Cook, stirring and scraping up pork drippings until sauce is hot. Return pork mixture to pan; heat through. Season with hot sauce if desired. To assemble, portion ½ cup hot rice into center of each hot tortilla; top with a generous ¼ cup pork mixture and ¼ cup cheese. Fold in two sides then roll tortilla around filling. Makes 4 wraps.

Consuming Thoughts

More people are dining out at gourmet restaurants, family style buffets and fast food — quick stop shops than ever before. But does this mean that eating out is better and healthier than cooking at home?

While you can't control the ingredients in the foods you eat in restaurants, you can choose food wisely and eat moderate amounts in any of the mentioned eating establishments. Naturally, some restaurants will have better selections and larger choices.

Here are some tips for eating healthy at restaurants:

- Choose steamed, grilled, stir-fried, or baked meats and vegetables.

- Limit the amount of fried foods, heavy sauces, and gravies

you eat. Choose tomato-based sauces and soups instead of creamed ones.

- Eat bread and potatoes with only small amounts of butter or margarine.

- Order sauces and salad dressings on the side, when possible, and then add them sparingly.

- When portion choices are available, order small or half portions or share a menu item with your dining partner.

- Choose vegetable toppings for pizza instead of sausage or extra cheese.

- At the salad bar, limit heavy dressings; go easy on toppings like croutons and cheese and items made with mayonnaise, such as macaroni salad.

- Ask questions about what the menu terms mean if you don't understand them. Some terms can be misleading. If you're unsure, ask how the food is prepared or what the ingredients are.

- Don't be afraid to send something back to the kitchen if it tastes too fatty, or salty, or serve with lots of mayonnaise when you specifically asked them to omit the dressing.

Beverages:

- Choose milk, preferably skim or lowfat, instead of a soda, cappuccino or a shake.

- Be aware that commercially prepared milkshakes often include sodium in their ingredients as well as whole milk and sugar.

- Ask for water if milk isn't available.

Dessert:

- Skip it! Or make it an occasional treat. Many of the dessert items are high in calories, fat and sugar.

- Split a dessert and give away half the calories too.

- Choose fresh fruit from the salad bar, if available, as an alternative.

Desserts don't have to be eliminated from the menu. You may want to skip dessert at the restaurant and then invite friends back to your home for the final course. Try making these healthier choice desserts at home. Then serve them as alternatives to the offerings found in restaurants.

- fruit breads made with whole wheat flour.

- fresh fruit, baked or broiled, spiced with cinnamon, nutmeg, or mint.

- pudding made with lowfat milk and less sugar.

- unsweetened fresh fruit topped with lowfat yogurt.

- rolled oat toppings for fruit crisps, instead of flour/sugar/butter crumb toppings.

- cookie recipes with less sugar and fat.

- crustless or single-crust pies — try a crust made with 1 cup of graham cracker crumbs and 3 tablespoons of soft margarine.

sow Kale early in rows 16 to 24 inches apart and thin plants to 5 to 10 inches apart in the rows.

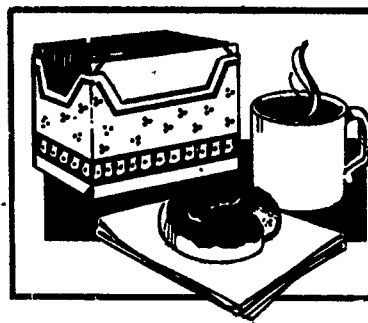

Beets are another early starter. Today there are lots of new beet shapes and colors. Best varieties mature quickly, growing in about 50 days.

Other early crops include broccoli, brussels sprouts and cabbage. Purchase locally grown plants and transplant them into the garden.

Carrots mature in about 70 days. Harvest carrots when they are small for the best flavor and color. Add fresh carrots to salads and stir-frys. Sow the seed thinly. Less thinning will be required later. Choose the earliest varieties to sow in spring.

Swiss chard, a leafy green vegetable with bright red ribs, adds color to the garden. Also start radishes early. They can be sweet or hot and add color to salads and cooking. While some gardeners may go for the largest radishes they can grow (by leaving them in the ground), early harvesting yields smaller radishes with a more subtle flavor preferred by many cooks.

Cook's Question Corner

ANSWER — Thanks to Cathie Weinberg, director for media relations at the Olive Garden, for sending the restaurant's recipe for Tiramisu, which had been requested.

Tiramisu

10-12-inch diameter sponge cake, about 3-inches tall
3 ounces strong black coffee or prepared instant espresso
3 ounces brandy, rum, or your favorite liqueur
1½ pounds cream cheese or mascarpone*, room temperature

1½ cups superfine or powdered sugar

*available at some Italian specialty and gourmet food stores.

Cut across the middle of the sponge cake to form two discs, about 1-1½-inch thick, each. Blend the coffee or espresso and liqueur together. Sprinkle the bottom half of the cake with the coffee liqueur blend, enough to flavor it strongly, but don't saturate a cake so much that it will collapse. Mix the cream cheese or mascarpone with the sugar and beat the cheese until the sugar is completely dissolved and the cheese is light and spreadable. Spread the bottom half of the cake with half of the creamy cheese, in a fairly thick layer. Set the second half of the cake on the bottom half and repeat the process—sprinkle with coffee/liqueur blend and spread with the remaining cream cheese. Put the cocoa powder into a wire strainer and coat the top layer of cream cheese completely with cocoa. Refrigerate cake for at least two hours before cutting and serving. Serves 4-6.

Egg Cheese

2 quarts warm milk
1 pint buttermilk or thick
4 eggs

Beat eggs until fluffy. Add thick milk and beat together. Combine with warm milk and heat until it separates. If heated too long, the solids will become hard. Put mixture into container to drain. When cold, eat with molasses.

ANSWER — Sue Dunlays, Jersey Shore, wanted to know what is Clear Jel, which appeared in a recent recipe for blueberry pie filling. Clear Jel is a modified food starch made for commercial food processors, which is available at bulk food stores and in some supermarkets. Clear Jel, sometimes called Clear Gel, has the same properties as cornstarch and equal thickening power. Unlike Clear Jel, it can be reheated (canning) and doesn't break down or separate if frozen. Instant Clear Jel should be mixed with sugar before adding water or liquid since it thickens as soon as it is combined with water.

Warm Weather Encourages Ant Problems

COLLEGEVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — Now is the time of year when ants start to invade homes, says an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "During the winter, ants remain in their sheltered nesting spots," says extension entomologist Steven Jacobs. "But as temperatures rise and spring rains arrive, they start to venture out and forage for food."

Ant problems are most noticeable when the nests are located in and around your house. Jacobs says several types of ants can be found in homes, but two of the most common are carpenter ants and pavement ants. Carpenter ants are large, black insects that build nests by excavating rotted wood or other materials. When they find their way inside your house, they tend to congregate in existing voids, such as hollow doors or the space between studs in walls.

Although often blamed for causing damage to wood, carpenter ants usually are little more than a nuisance, says Jacobs. "Carpenter ants are somewhat lazy, he explains. "They usually attack wood that's already rotted. If they run into a good, strong piece of wood, they generally won't go much farther. But they have been known to cause extensive damage to insulation board."

Spraying insecticide along baseboards and around doors and windows may stop carpenter ants from foraging in that area temporarily. But because the nests often are in walls, it won't eliminate the problem. "commercial ant baits aren't very effective for carpenter ants," Jacobs says. "So the other option is to find the colony, drill holes and spray inside the walls."

Some homeowners may prefer to hire professional help to get rid of carpenter ants. Jacobs says you should get three estimates from reputable pest control companies if you decide to hire a professional. Pavement ants are small, black ants that usually build nests beneath concrete or asphalt. "You've probably seen these ants coming and going through cracks in pavement," says Jacobs. "They sometimes are found in basements and under patios, driveways and garage floors." Pavement ants and other varieties often can be eliminated with baits. If placed strategically around infested areas, baits will attract ants. When the foragers return to the nest with the bait, the insecticide in the bait will kill any ants that ingest it. "Baits are highly selective and easily disposed of," says Jacobs.

If you notice ants in your house only during the summer, they probably are foragers coming from an outdoor nest, according to Jacobs. "In that case, periodic spraying around the outside of your house should repel them and take care of the problem."

Ten participants from the Ohio State University Extension meet with EFNEP advisers from York, Lancaster, Franklin, and Dauphin counties to exchange

Nutrition Advisers Exchange Effective Methods

—Game shows, a mop, and empty food containers sound like a strange combination.

But these are a few of the items that Susan Fisher calls creative teaching techniques.

Fisher is supervising extension agent for Lancaster and surrounding counties' Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP).

EFNEP's purpose is to teach cooking, meal planning, wise food buying, storage, and preservation to families on a limited budget.

In an effort to find new ideas and concepts for teaching, 10 nutrition advisers from the Ohio State University Extension Service meet with EFNEP advisers from York, Lancaster, Franklin, and Dauphin counties to exchange ideas of what works and what doesn't in the EFNEP outreach.

Much of the curriculum used has been devised by the advisers who teach the classes. The exchange offered time for the advisers to share what has worked for them.

The two-day meeting was filled with sharing information and hands-on learning. Dominating the exchange were comments such as "we could do that," "that is so neat," and "let's try that."

"I'm so excited about all the things we have learned," said Meri

Lynn Klingensmith, EFNEP adviser from Ohio.

Pennsylvanians felt the same way.

"The exchange really sparked enthusiasm in me," said Brenda Stallman, a Lancaster-based EFNEP adviser who has taught EFNEP classes for six years at Bar-

Women Especially Need To Bone Up On Calcium

LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)

— Participants of a recent "Bone Up On Calcium" workshop filled out questionnaires to find out if they were getting enough calcium in their diets.

Most were not.

The results were not surprising, since many adult women have low intakes of calcium. Low calcium intakes increase the risk of developing osteoporosis, a disease that weakens bones. Almost half of the women more than 45 in the U.S. have osteoporosis.

Although dairy products are considered the highest source of calcium, many women do not drink milk or use dairy products because they are either lactose intolerant, which is the inability to digest significant amounts of lactose, the predominant sugar in milk, or because they fear excess calories from the fat found in dairy products.

The fat concern has resulted in a barrage of low-fat and non-fat dairy products on supermarket dairy cases. These contain the same amount of calcium without the fat.

Despite the availability of calcium-rich foods, many American women's diet are seriously lacking calcium.

Concerned about the lack of understanding people have about how to incorporate more calcium into the diet, Nancy Wiker, family living extension agent for Lancaster County, taught the session at the Farm and Home Center.

"You can boost your calcium intake with nonfat milk. Add it to casseroles, soups, and other foods," she said.

Wiker suggested adding two tablespoons instant non-fat dry milk in addition to the fluid milk required in a recipe. This would increase calcium from 186 mg to 238 mg per cup.

Since nonfat dry milk contains approximately the same amount of calcium but not the fat of whole milk, it offers an inexpensive way to include more calcium in the diet.

Selecting fresh orange juice with added calcium is another easy way to incorporate more calcium into your daily diet, Wiker said.

Most people know that it is important for children to drink milk for plenty of calcium, but few know that women actually need more calcium than children under 10, and more than that after 51 years of age. For women 25-49 years of age, the recommended intake is 1,000 mg per day. For postmenopausal, nursing mothers, and women over 65, the recommended daily amount is 1,500 mg of calcium.

A recent study found that those who are lactose intolerant can drink 8 ounces of milk a day without ill effects.

For those who experience discomfort after consuming lactose-containing products, the following strategies may help achieve daily recommended calcium intakes:

- Drink 8 ounces or less milk at a time and consume it as part of a meal or snack.
- Try hard cheeses, such as Swiss or cheddar
- Eat yogurt
- Look for lactose-reduced or lactose-free products in the grocery store.

While milk has a high percentage of calcium (291-316 mg per 1 cup) compared to other foods, it is not the only way to keep calcium in the diet. Other calcium sources are sardines, tofu, salmon with bones, collard greens, kale, and broccoli.

Although calcium milligrams are not listed on food labels, percentages are. It is important to read labels in order to make wise choices in food selections.

Sometimes substitutions can be made in recipes. For example, in most recipes, cottage cheese and ricotta cheese are interchangeable. Because 1/4 cup cottage cheese has only 8 percent of the recommended daily percentage for calcium compared to 1/4 cup ricotta cheese with 25 percent of the recommended calcium, the best choice is ricotta cheese.

Here are some recipes Wiker handed out during the workshop. If you would like more recipes or information on calcium or lactose intolerance, contact your county extension office or Wiker at (717) 394-6851.

NONFAT WHIPPED TOPPING

Chill a small mixing bowl and beaters until they feel very cold. Mix 1/2 cup ice water with 1/2 cup instant nonfat dry milk. Beat at high speed until peaks form, about 5 minutes. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice and mix. Gradually beat in 3 tablespoons sugar. Chill for one hour before using. Add 1/2 to 1 teaspoon vanilla if desired.

Two tablespoons of the nonfat whipped topping will provide about 50 mg of calcium and only 18 calories with a trace of fat. Compare this with Cool Whip, which has little calcium, 26 calories, and 2 grams fat.

MILLION DOLLAR CASSEROLE

4 ounces macaroni or shells
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1 pound extra-lean ground beef
2 large onions, diced
1 cup sliced mushrooms
White Sauce:
1 1/2 cups low-fat milk
1/2 cup nonfat dry milk powder
2 tablespoons butter
2 1/2 tablespoons flour
1/4 cup minced fresh parsley or 1 tablespoon dried parsley
2 teaspoons dill
1 teaspoon salt or less
6 tablespoons chopped nuts (optional)

Cook macaroni in boiling water, with teaspoon of vegetable oil. Cook about 8 minutes or until just tender. Do not overcook. Drain and pour into lightly oiled, 9-inch square baking dish. Sprinkle with half the cheese and set aside.

Brown the ground beef in frying pan. Drain the fat when it is thoroughly browned. Spread the onions and mushrooms on top of the meat. Cover the pan and cook over medium heat until the onions and mushrooms are tender, about 5 minutes.

White sauce:

Mix the nonfat dry milk powder with the low-fat milk. Warm briefly in the microwave oven or in a cooking pot over low heat. Set aside. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Melt butter in a medium cooking pot. Mix in flour and stir constantly over low heat for 2 minutes. Remove from heat. Pour in warm milk and mix well. Stir constantly over medium heat until sauce comes to a boil and thickens. Stir in parsley, dill, and salt.

Mix the white sauce with the meat mixture. Pour it over the macaroni in the baking dish. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake 25 minutes in a conventional oven. Refrigerate or freeze leftovers for later use. Optional: top with chopped nuts after 15 minutes of baking. Bake for another 10 minutes.

Makes 8 servings. One serving equals 260 calories, 15 g fat, 185 mg calcium, and 395 mg sodium.

Log Cabin Llamas will be part of the 200-300 on display at the Eastern Llama and Alpaca Festival to be held May 3-4.

Log Cabin Llamas Pack For International Show

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff
EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Ten years ago, Flo Harnish purchased her first llama to begin Log Cabin Llamas.

"Stress relievers," Flo calls the tall, graceful animals. She spends hours watching her herd of 20 mingle in the pasture that borders the property's log cabin.

The tall, stately llamas have an air of regality about them. Rather than being standoffish, llamas treat newcomers with friendly curiosity. They sniff and nose camera cases and coat pockets, no doubt in search of a treat that Flo is known to smuggle to them.

While a decade has only deepened Flo's affection for the llamas, much has changed. Llama prices have dwindled, with males starting at $500. A weanling will cost about $2,500 and a pregnant female $3,000.

According to Flo, the fluctuating market is the result of lots of wooly imports. But she contends that the market has settled on North American llamas with long, thin necks, long banana-shaped ears, and plenty of wool. Through breeding programs, North American llamas excel with preferred characteristics so much so that South America is now purchasing artificial insemination services from the states to upgrade the native llamas.

The usage of llamas has also shifted in the last decade. Formerly llamas were viewed as an aristocratic pet. But now llamas are being used more and more as pack animals for parks, golf caddies, and even guard animals.

While it's difficult to comprehend that calm, gentle llamas can ward off wolves and coyotes, it is a well-established fact. In areas where sheep herds are attacked by wolves and coyotes, people are buying llamas to guard their sheep.

Theoretically it would seem that a wolf or coyote could easily mangle a llama. But it appears that llamas inadvertently use psychology to rule the range. Llamas do not spook easily and are naturally curious. This causes them to fearlessly approach and stare down wolves, dogs, coyotes, and even bear. Predators are known to slink off with their tails between their legs. There are some reports that llamas are known to strike sheep predators with their hooves.

It is reported that llamas do a better job as guardians than watch dogs, and are cheaper. An article in the "Smithsonian" reported that while a guard dog may cost $400 and the llama $700, because of disease and accident, only half the working dogs live to be three years old, while a llama may live to be 20. In addition, guard dogs require a year of training while llamas seem to know intuitively what to do or at the most require a few days training. In addition, dogs need dog food, but llamas eat what the sheep eat.

A llama becomes lonely if not raised with another llama or with goats or sheep. Space of one acre per four llamas is recommended. In keeping with llamas' natural habitat, only one male per herd is recommended; otherwise, they will fight.

Llamas are hardy and need little doctoring. Deer are known to carry a parasite which effects llamas so llamas need to be dewormed. Log Cabin Llamas are surrounded by woods with deer but have never transmitted a disease to the llamas.

Llamas are considered spare eaters similar to goats. They are fed grain such as horse feed, salts with selenium, hay or grass, and water.

While most people do not view llamas as housepets, Flo said people are often astounded to learn that she occasionally brings one into the house. Because llamas have soft pads on their feet, their hooves do not mark flooring. They can be housebroken and even taught to shake hands like a dog.

Llama offspring are called cria. This mamma has two-week-old twins. They like to chase each other and can be halter-broken in minutes.

In typical stocking-feet spinner's fashion, Flo spins yarn collected from her llamas. Spinning displays of llama yarn will also be featured at the Eastern Llama and Alpaca Festival.

Llamas birth easily, usually in the middle of the day with no needed assistance. In the 10 years, the Harnishes had llamas, only one was stillborn.

In her fascination with llamas, Flo has learned to capitalize on all aspects. Twice her llamas appeared on the cover of an international llama journal.

She spins llama yarn collected from her llamas for knitted sweaters, scarves, and hats for family members. The wool rarely shrinks when washed and is wonderfully soft and light yet warm. The wool can be either sheared or combed out of the llama.

"They need to be sheared in the spring because of the heat; otherwise they become too warm," Flo said.

The natural colorings of the wool range from pure white to black with all kinds of brown variations in between. Flo's favorite is reddish brown. Previously Flo and her husband David, a surgeon, named the llama offspring. Now they let their 6-year-old twin grandchildren name the cria or young llamas.

Flo also paints and has donated one of her llama paintings to the Llama Association to be auctioned with the proceeds go to llama research. She also has postcards printed with one of her paintings of Log Cabin Llamas.

At the upcoming Llama and Alpaca Festival, Flo will give a talk on using llamas in public relations. The llamas are said to be great thernes Hall, a youth detention center. "They (Ohio) are working a lot more with groups in agency settings while we work more with individuals," Stallman said.

Both outreaches have their pros and cons. While group settings enables a larger number of families to be reached, advisers miss out on the environmental and dynamics of home settings.

Lot of activities and visuals were shared by both teams. The Ohio team demonstrated a "Nutrition Concentration" game patterned after television's "Concentration" game show, which they use to teach people to associate a food with a particular food group.

A calcium display with flour packaged in clear plastic resealable bags gave a visual meaning to the amount of calcium needed for healthy bone. A newborn's skeleton contains about 1/4 cup of calcium; a 10-year-old's, 3.5 cups; a 15-year-old's, 7 cups; an adult's, 11 cups; and a female with osteoporosis, 6.5 cups.

An effective method for teaching fat contents of food was to label clear jars with a food name such as French fries. The amount of fat found in french fries is measured with a blob of play dough. One of the clients reported giving her son Oodles of Noodles several times a day as an alternative to snack food. When she was shown how much fat was in the product, she understood why her son had a weight problem.

To teach label reading, empty containers of food products were saved and refilled with the same amount of sugar and salt that the food contained. Seeing the amount of salt in soups and the amount of sugar in soft drinks makes much more of an impact than simply reading the labels.

While the need for families to know how to cook and what foods to buy is monumental, the job is an awesome responsibility. A few instructions to change a lifetime habit of eating fast food isn't sufficient. For this reason, Pennsylvania EFNEP advisers became involved in what is called SuperCupboard.

SuperCupboard was formed to educate frequent users of emergency food services. Using a combination of food assistance, nutrition education, food preparation, and basic living skills, community agencies work together to help break the cycle of dependency on food banks.

EFNEP advisers meet with a group of mothers at designated places such as the Salvation Army, a church kitchen, or a community facility. In addition to classroom instruction, a complete meal is prepared with the help of participants and eaten. The participants are given the ingredients to go home and prepare the same meal for their families.

This hands-on instruction seems to be successful in developing healthful cooking habits.

The Ohio group was excited about the concept of the SuperCupboard program after participating in one in the Lancaster area.

Both Ohio and Pennsylvania plan to implement the methods and opportunities they learned through the exchange.

Fisher said she will use one of the demonstrations shared by the Ohio group in her work with EFNEP.

In the demonstration, an enlarged copy of a $100 bill was placed on the cloth section of a short handled mop. Participants were encouraged to balance the mop handle in the palm of their hand just by looking at their hand. It couldn't be done. Participants were told to look at the $100 bill when trying to balance the mop. Immediately the balancing became easy to do.

"The demonstration illustrates that if keep your eyes focused on the money you have available instead of just spending it freely, your budget will balance," Fisher said.

"One of my favorite memories is of wheelchairs and crutches scattered all over our meadow. The llamas were going from hand to hand to meet the people. Both people and llamas loved it," Flo said of the time a physically challenged group visited Log Cabin Llamas.

Flo is on the planning committee for the Eastern Llama and Alpaca Festival to be held at Charming Forge Farm near Reading on May 3-4.

"It's a wonderful event for the whole family. It's free. People often come to these events just to see the llamas. They can pet the llamas and ask questions. But there are so many other things happening," Flo said.

Spinners, weavers, and felters will demonstrate their skills by using the luxuriously soft wool from llamas.

Llama Olympics will include llamas and alpacas performing obstacle course challenges such as hurdles, a limbo bar, relay races, and other competition.

According to Flo, the llamas will enjoy the event as much as visitors. "Llamas like doing things with people and like a challenge such as pulling a pony cart."

To find the Festival, follow llama signs from Route 78, Exit 6 Rehrersburg, to Rt. 419 south.

Ida's Notebook by Ida Risser

The weeds in our strawberries and iris are growing fast. But, it has been so cold and windy that I do not feel like spending hours outdoors. Maybe the mild winter gave them a headstart.

The sugar peas are several inches high and so are the 100 onions that I planted. Garden Cress comes up even before the lettuce and radishes. It has a taste similar to water cress and is good with butter bread. The concord grapes on the red brick smokehouse have been pruned and also the blueberries.

We asked our six-year-old grandson to go along to a program at our church. It was a bird show in which parrots and other exotic birds performed tricks. They played dead and picked up toys and coins and were very colorful. The problem was that the three-year-old brother wanted to go along too but the program was too long for

FLY & ODOR CONTROL

BIG PERFORMANCE...SMALL PRICE

SIMPLE PROCEDURE: the aerator works directly into the bed of material, forming its own windrow. Windrows can be formed from piles of nearly any size. Alleyways are not required when using the Brown aerator, so there is a great reduction in space requirements. The aerator's reverse rotation works the material from the bottom up and to the side, assuring complete mixing and agitation. LOW MAINTENANCE: the aerator is a simple design, the principle as a material mover has been proven with over 30 years experience in practical application. The aerator is hydraulically driven and equipped with patented wearplates or paddles, both of which are easily replaced.

ANSWER — Ed Craig, Newton Hamilton, wants to build a fruit cave and had heard that unless the entrance faces north, the cave will have problems with dampness and sweating even if it is deep into the ground. But he has noticed that a lot of old farm caves face in every direction and wanted to know more about erecting farm caves.

Thanks to Therese Todd, Elkton, Md., for writing that the facing of the entrance has no relationship to whether or not there will be excess dampness or sweating inside. Proper ventilation and circulation of air is what prevents the dampness and sweating. The air intake must be down low and the outlet for stale air up high and not obstructed, and shelves set for air circulation.

She writes that a good source of information on building root cellars is the book "Root Cellaring," by Mike and Nancy Bubel, published by Rodale Press 1979, Emmaus, Pa.

ANSWER — Fran Westfall, New Oxford, answers the question about blue birds. She writes that two years ago, they put a bird feeder and blue bird boxes all over the place. Many times sparrows and mice get inside and build nests. Tear it and keep it clean. Although the sparrows may return the next day, continue to tear out the nests. Bluebirds are not easily scared and will build nests — they have plenty to prove it.

ANSWER — Ida Risser writes that she has horseradish root to give to S. Miller or anyone else who will come and take it. Call her at (717) 656-6397.

him. We shall have to think of something to entertain him as he was upset with us even though I baked and iced a cake for him.

We've had several old cherry trees fall over recently. One fell on the road and another fell in our field. So, my husband has been sawing logs and also burning brush. It seems to be a never-ending job as he now has a lot of cord wood piled.

There are so many sales in the spring and on Monday I am kept busy phoning auctioneers to get prices. There were almost 50 people to call last week. I'm still typing the reports on my old typewriter even though there is a new one stored in the attic. Familiar things are easier to deal with it seems.

Our black cat had six black kittens last year and this year she surprised us with three white kittens. However, now they are turning a light gray color. We hope they have room for them on the dairy farm.

Meat Cholesterol Study

DES MOINES, Iowa — Cholesterol levels are of great interest to consumers. A group of Iowa State University researchers developed a more accurate method for measuring cholesterol, while at the same time producing new information on cholesterol levels in meat products.

The study was funded by the Iowa Beef Industry Council. "The meat industry has been pushing for more accurate methods of determining cholesterol levels," Parrish says. In addition, the industry wanted new information on cholesterol contents of various meat cuts.

Ten samples each of both fresh and cooked beef, pork and poultry retail products were tested. For fresh samples, 70 percent ground beef and 90 percent ground turkey showed the highest cholesterol content. Pork chops and skinless turkey tenderloins had the lowest amount of cholesterol, but the values were not significantly different from top butt, strip loin and eye of round beef steaks, or center ham slices.

For cooked products, the skinless chicken thigh was significantly higher in cholesterol and the turkey tenderloins was significantly lower. All the other cooked beef and pork products were similar in cholesterol content.

Parrish says he was the most surprised by the high cholesterol level in the skinless chicken thigh. "We generally think of chicken as being low in cholesterol. Raw chicken thigh meat has about 70 mg of cholesterol per 100 grams. But cooking almost doubled that level."

Parrish says now that the meat industry is required to provide cholesterol content on nutrition labels, it's important to provide the most accurate information possible. He added that this study showed there just isn't much difference in the cholesterol levels of most meat products. "People who want to control their cholesterol intake probably need to think more about portion control," he says.

Frederick Farm Women Hold Spring Luncheon

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent
NEW MIDWAY, Md. — Frederick County farm women met here at the fire hall for an afternoon of fun and fellowship. The annual spring luncheon, sponsored by the county Farm Bureau Women's committee, drew a crowd of approximately 150 farm women and industry personnel.

Guest speaker at the event was Marci Cordaro, a registered nurse from the Frederick County Health Department program on breast and cervical cancer prevention, who talked on the importance of early detection of cancer. The county program provides services at no charge to women who are under-insured or have no health insurance.

The Frederick County farm women are very active in community events, and for the past three years in a row they have been honored as the Outstanding Women's Committee at the state convention in Ocean City. Louise Stup, chairperson of the committee, accounted for the group's success by explaining, "They are a hard working group of women. They all work together and all have common goal, they are farm oriented. If you give them a job to do, they do it."

"Most of our aims are educational," stressed Mrs. Stup. The women are active at the county fair, where they staff an informative agricultural booth each year. They also participate in Farm-City week, an outreach program held each November. They are active in the Farm Bureau/Grange legislative day, and last year had the largest group of attendees at the Women's Day in Annapolis, where the ladies met with Senators and Delegates. They are involved in Ag Day at the mall. And they help with the safety camp for farm children, providing snacks and serving lunch each year. Each year the women also give several academic scholarships, and donate funds to the Christmas Cash For Kids program.

Officers for the Women's committee were elected at the December meeting, and are as follows: Louise Stup, chairperson; Evelyn Wilcom, vice chairperson; Terrie Stup, recording secretary; Terry Lambert, corresponding secretary; and Louise Ediger, treasurer.

Luncheon committee members included: Janice Beachley, Evelyn Wilcom, Evelyn Gaver, Jenny Rhoderick, Margaret Wachter, Francis Black, Terrie Stup, Alice Wilcom, and Marcia Montgomery.

Entertainment for the luncheon was provided by "Mom's Nite Out," members of the Clustered Spires Sweet Adelines Chorus from Frederick. Members of the group are Virginia Crist, Jennie Boone, Jeanette McConagha, and Adele Connolly.

Living On A

Reduced Income —

Strategies For Spending Less

When your income is reduced, take immediate action to stop all excess spending. Whether your situation is temporary or extended, you need to get the most for your money.

Studies have found that many families do not adjust their lifestyle until about six months after their income is reduced. That six months of ignoring the situation can bring disaster. When you take charge of your financial situation, you are making a positive contribution to your family's well-being now and in the future.

Following basic money management principles can reduce stress and help you adjust to living on less income. Here is a list of research tested principles:

- Make a list of your most important expenses while you have less income. (This means things you must have or do.)

- Make a spending plan to determine where your money will go.

- Decide where you will spend your money. Stick to your spending plan. With less income, each spending decision is critical.

- Most people give high priority to fixed expenses such as rent or mortgage payments, insurance premiums, car payments and installment debts. Flexible expenses such as food, utilities, clothing, and household expenses can be more easily adjusted to fit your income. Most people find it easier to cut back on flexible expenses.

All family members need to work together to reduce spending. When everyone pulls together to cooperate, you are more likely to succeed in living on less.

As you and your family thinks about things you could do to cut expenditures, ask yourselves how you could reduce spending:

- Can you substitute a less costly item?

- How can you conserve your resources and avoid waste?

- Are there opportunities for you to cooperate with others by trading or sharing resources?

- Can you save if you do-it-yourself?

- Can you do without?

Another important exercise to go through before buying an item is to ask yourself:

- Can I do without?

- Can I postpone its purchase?

- Can I substitute something else that costs less?

- Can I use my own skills to make it myself?

- Do I already own one?

If you would like to have more information on ways to reduce spending, please contact your local county cooperative extension office.

FFA Breaks Ground In Northwest Indianapolis
The National FFA Organization held a groundbreaking ceremony Monday, April 21, for its new National FFA Center in Indianapolis.

The organization announced that it purchased a five-acre plot of land near 86th Street and Interstate 465 at a reduced price from The Dow Chemical Company, Midland, Mich. Construction of the building is expected to be completed by spring 1998.

More than 75 FFA members from Indiana and state officers from Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, and Illinois joined the six national FFA officers and local dignitaries to turn the first ceremonial shovel of soil at the new site. Speakers included Joseph Kernan, Indiana lieutenant governor and commissioner of agriculture; Stephen Goldsmith, Indianapolis mayor; Wayne Beck, vice president, supply management, Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., and chair of the National FFA Foundation Sponsors' Board; Corey Rosenbusch, national FFA president; and Larry D. Case, chief executive officer and national advisor of the National FFA Organization.

"The business FFA is involved in — preparing young people to be leaders — is the most important business," Kernan said. "These young people will be in charge and will bring their skills to the table for the next generation. They will make things happen."

Goldsmith said that the city worked to attract FFA partly because of the economic impact, but more importantly because of the civic impact. "FFA members have leadership skills, the right values, all the things that will make our country great in the future," he said.

Rosenbusch, speaking on behalf of the more than 452,000 FFA members nationwide, acknowledged the significance of the day. "It's true that from this ground a new building will rise to house the National FFA Organization," he said. "But beyond the building, this day signifies a reaffirmation of FFA's commitment to changing the lives of young people. When we build young people we build families and communities. And when we build communities we build a nation."

Later in the day, Indianapolis welcomed FFA to the city with a reception at the State House.

The FFA, a national organization for high school students preparing for careers in the business, science, and technology of agriculture, announced last September that it would move its 80-employee business and foundation operations to Indianapolis from Alexandria, Va., and Madison, Wis. The FFA headquarters will remain a part of the U.S. Department of Education in the Washington, D.C. area.

"Moving our business operations to Indianapolis better positions the FFA and agricultural education for the future," Case said. "Indianapolis provides a better quality of life for our staff, puts us closer to the majority of our members and helps reduce operating costs. The supportive local agribusiness community and youth-focused state philosophy also help us achieve our mission of making a positive difference in the lives of students through agricultural education."

The National FFA Foundation, Inc., has initiated a national capital campaign, themed "I Believe in the Future," to help finance the land and building. FFA has received local leadership gifts totaling $1.5 million from The Lilly Endowment, DowElanco and The Lilly Fund on behalf of Elanco Animal health.

The Dow Chemical Company is one of the parent companies of DowElanco, both long-time supporters of FFA that sponsor several educational and leadership programs. The land sale, partly made possible by a gift from DowElanco and Dow Chemical, is an extension of that support.

"The most important investment we can make is in the future of our young people and the future of the agricultural industry," said John Hagaman, president and chief executive officer of DowElanco. "We have long believed that supporting FFA is the best way to make that investment. The return is evident in our employees, many of whom are former FFA members, and in the young students we meet through involvement in FFA. These students will become the industry's next leaders, and they are well-prepared."

The 40,000 square-foot Frank Lloyd Wright prairie-style building design reflects the strong history and bright future of FFA, with a solid, stone foundation rising to a more modern, glass atrium. A highlight of the building is the Hall of Achievement, set in a rotunda just inside the main entrance. This display of FFA history, mission and future goals is expected to be a popular site for FFA members visiting from across the country. The surrounding area will include a pond and natural area created through an FFA student landscape design competition.

Ratio Architects, Inc., Indianapolis, has been hired to design the building, and the construction company is F.A. Wilhelm Co., Inc., Indianapolis.

Book Report

The Scythe Book by David Tresemer is back in print. In an age when most wonder how they can accomplish anything without the aid of electricity or gasoline, The Scythe Book shows how a traditional hand tool can often outperform modern technology. For the gardener, farmer, or homeowner, a scythe, a good scythe, is an efficient and enjoyable tool for cutting grasses and weeds and for harvesting small grains.

Tresemer takes grain and forage cutting from the beginning, trails it down through history and explains the use and care of the modern scythe. Many of its 110 pages are utterly practical, and the soft cover book is available through any bookstore for $15.00 or directly from the publisher. To order directly, enclose an additional $2.50 to cover postage and handling for a total of $17.50. Send order to Alan C. Hood & Co., Inc., Box 775, Chambersburg, PA 17201.

Messick Farm Equipment, Inc.

Elizabethtown, PA

Messick Farm Equipment's beginnings go back to November 26, 1952, when two brothers, Marlin and Merville Messick broke ground and erected a new building along Route 230, three miles north of Elizabethtown.

The dealership officially opened on February 1, 1953, with Marlin as Shop Manager, and Merville handling both the sales and parts department.

Two years later a full-time salesman and one additional mechanic were hired, and in 1962 an addition was built to the existing building, housing a showroom and additional parts area.

The successful Messick enterprise once again outgrew its shell, and a new 21-acre site was purchased at the present location along Route 283, at the Rheems Exit, Elizabethtown.

With the new facilities providing 7,200 square feet of shop space, and 6,000 square feet of showroom, Messick celebrated its grand opening in February of 1977. Messicks have since expanded the building twice and have built an additional warehouse.

Today Messick attributes much of its growth to its 49 employees, including 18 mechanics, 14 partsmen, 5 salesmen, and four office personnel.

Factory trained as well as privately instructed, Messick's servicemen have years of experience in the agricultural field. The firm's parts department has experience in providing customers with the correct parts as quickly as possible.

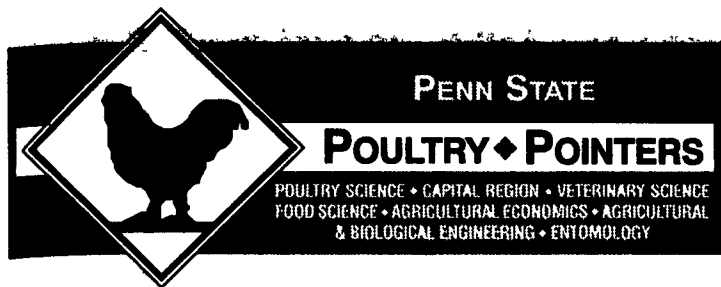

To Messick's staff, the idea of simply making a sale, is secondary to their goal of providing the customer with the correct equipment to get the job done. They are committed to keeping their customers up and running with over 1 million dollars in parts inventory.

TRENDS IN EGG MARKETING

Paul H. Patterson
Assistant Professor Department of Poultry Science

Marketing is the process or technique of selling and distributing a product or service. For the egg industry, there are recent trends in marketing that look positive and have the potential to sustain good egg prices into the near future.

First, let's review where we are today as an industry and where we've been.

The number of egg producers in the U.S. has dropped dramatically in the past 10 years (Table 1). In 1985 there were 3,200 producers, while today only 1,000 remain. Of those, 380 own 94 percent of the 240 million layers in the country (2). Further, fewer hens today produce 5.3 million more cases of eggs annually compared to 10 years ago.

While the U.S. population has grown about 1 percent per year, U.S. per capita consumption of eggs had dropped about 2 eggs per person per year in the same 10-year period. Egg price in 1995 averaged 76.5 cents per dozen and during the preceding 10-year period, producers experienced five years of profits and five years of loss with a net return of $.02/dozen for the 10-year period.

Sales of total shell eggs in the U.S. have undergone some significant changes (Table 2). Retail sales of carton eggs are down 8 percent in 1995 compared to 1985 (2). Food service including hospitals, restaurants, caterers, and fast food establishments such as McDonalds and Hardees have reduced their use of shell eggs eight million cases (5.3 percent), while their use of egg products has increased the equivalent of 11 million cases during the same 10-year

Beginning in 1988, concerns about Salmonella contributed to the increased use of pasteurized liquid and frozen eggs at both retail and food service outlets. While exports are only a small percentage of total shell egg movement, they represent a considerable growth area for the future.

Today there are several bright spots for egg marketing. These include egg products, specialty eggs, and exports. Egg products have grown significantly in the last 10 years (Table 3). In 1985, 27.1 million cases were broken for liquid, dried or frozen products. This represented 16 percent of total egg sales, whereas in 1995 it has increased to 47.6 million cases and greater than 27 percent of sales (2).

Food manufacturers such as General Foods, Sara Lee, Nabisco, Kraft, and others in 1985 were using 19.5 million cases or 72 percent of all egg products. In 1995 we have seen a 12 percent growth in food manufacturers' use of egg products. While food service has experienced a drop in shell egg use, their demand for pasteurized egg products represents a net growth of 8 percent.

Exports of dried and frozen eggs increased to 3.5 million cases in 1995 and represents 2 percent of all eggs produced in the U.S. Essentially no retailing of egg products took place in 1985, whereas today liquid egg products are commonly seen in supermarkets and other retail outlets. These represent extremely positive trends for the egg products industry. While total growth in egg production was only 3 percent in the last 10 years, demand for egg products has almost doubled during the same period.

Specialty eggs are another growth market for the egg industry. These are eggs promoted as having one or more features beyond generic white or brown eggs

Specialty eggs can be divided into several subgroups including 1) nutritionally altered eggs, 2) organic eggs, 3) fertile eggs, 4) eggs from welfare managed hens, 5) hens fed all-vegetable diets, as well as combinations of these different subgroups.

During the summer of 1996, a national survey of egg quality in the retail stores was conducted summarizing age, quality, price and regional distribution of large eggs (3). The survey — conducted by extension poultry specialists in California, Connecticut, Illinois, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, and Texas — evaluated 781 dozen eggs in six states, 39 cities, and 115 supermarkets. Individual egg weight, USDA measures of shell and interior quality, age (code packing date), and price were recorded. Eggs were divided into white, brown, and specialty egg categories. When specialty eggs were compared with generic white shelled eggs (Table 4), some interesting trends were observed.

Specialty eggs averaged 16.6 days old in the supermarket when compared to 11.6 days for the white eggs. The older eggs were also distinguished with lower Haugh unit (HU) values (63.8), which is a weight-adjusted measure of albumin height and quality, and a greater percentage of eggs (16.1 percent) with HU values less than 55. USDA Haugh Unit criteria for shell eggs are greater than 72 for AA, greater than 60 for A, and less than 60 for B quality eggs. Average egg weight of the specialty eggs was 60.2 g and the percentage of underweight eggs was 2.9 percent, indicating these eggs were packed heavier than the standard white eggs (Table 4).

Shell cracks were similar between the white and specialty eggs; however, leakers at almost 1 percent were more than threefold higher among the specialty eggs. Price differences were most interesting in that the range and average price per dozen for specialty eggs was approximately twice the price paid for generic white eggs.

We reported one specialty product at an upscale grocery store in the Philadelphia suburbs at $4.18/dozen, while the most expensive dozen ($4.38) was purchased from New York City.

Specialty egg types are compared in Table 5. The two most prominent types observed by extension specialists in the six state survey were eggs from hens on all vegetable diets (46.9 percent) and those managed in some type of welfare setting (21.0) — that is, free range, no cages, etc. Nutritionally altered eggs (usually reduced cholesterol or increased omega fatty acids) were another significant product offered for sale, while fertile and organic eggs were less prominent. Age of these products varied greatly from 18-19 days for organic eggs, nutritionally altered eggs, or eggs from hens on all vegetable diets, to 11 days for eggs from welfare managed hens.

The poorest HU values and the highest percentage of cracks were observed for the organic eggs, indicating shelf time and/or shell quality may be a factor with these eggs. However, prices indicated the organic eggs had a following willing to pay as much as $1.50 more than average generic eggs and almost $.50/dozen more than their nearest specialty egg competitor. Most specialty egg types gar-

Cutting Just Got Easier

ATLANTA, Ga. — Agco Corporation's Farmhand brand is expanding its 1997 product line by adding a full line of rotary cutters and estate groomers. The Farmhand RC1400 Series will round out the new group by providing operators with a heavy-duty, solid body cutter/shredder.

"The 1400 Series cutters were designed with versatility in mind — they can be used to cut grass, brush, or weeds or fit with an optional shredder kit for crop shredding," said Farmhand Marketing Manager Kevin Lund. "The optional shredder kit provides 19 cutting edges to insure complete crop shredding."

The RC1400 Series has a cutting width of 169 inches, a cutting depth range of 1-inch to 15 inches and can cut up to 2-inch diameter brush. The optional shredder kit adds 7 heavy-duty stationary blades and 6 rotary blades to the standard 6 rotary blades. For fast cutting through thick brush or stalks, the blades swing at an average speed of 15,400 feet per minute. To guarantee a uniform cut, the RC1400 Series has a 4-inch blade overlap.

The deck of the RC1400 Series is constructed of heavy-duty 7 gauge steel. The rugged ¼-inch thick skirt has an 11-inch depth for superior flow-through of cut or shredded material. The pull-type cutter weighs 3,250 pounds and the lift-type cutter weighs 3,180 pounds.

Row Units Set New Standards

MOLINE, Ill. — The next generation of MaxEmerge planting technology — MaxEmerge Plus — is ready to take the field. The new row unit features more than a dozen improvements that enhance its strength, accuracy, and ease of adjustment.

Among the improvements is a new welded mounting bracket that helps the mounting U-bolts stay torqued to maintain row-unit position on the frame. For tough no-till and minimum-tillage conditions, a new heavy-duty down-force system can be adjusted all the way up to 400 pounds.

Beginning in December, a pneumatic down-force system that is infinitely adjustable to 400 pounds will be available as an attachment for field conversion for all planter models. The system will be offered factory-installed on 1780 Front-Fold Planters starting in January.

A newly reinforced row-unit shank features a welded spline to minimize side deflection on rolling ground and in tough soils. The new shank is four times stronger than those used in previous MaxEmerge 2 row units, giving the MaxEmerge Plus row unit the industry's toughest shank design.

While the time-proven True-Vee™ opener is essentially unchanged from the previous model, the MaxEmerge Plus does feature a new centering tab that holds the seed tube in place for improved seed spacing and better depth control. The tab also helps extend the service life of the seed tubes. A heavier and wider seed-tube guard protects the seed tube from wear.

After the seed has been placed in the furrow, the row unit's optional in-furrow press wheel provides enhanced seed-to-soil contact for quick seed germination. This in-furrow press wheel also features a John Deere-exclusive lock-up feature that allows the operator to adjust the in-furrow press wheel up and out of the way when soil is wet and sticky.

Adjusting and servicing the row unit is quick and easy. The new unit features an easier-to-adjust gauge wheel assembly. The screw bushing and attaching bolt are locked together for proper wheel-to-disk spacing. No washers are needed.

New Cream To Grain Sorghum Lineup

SHAWNEE MISSION, Kan. — Agripro Seeds, Inc. has announced the addition of a new cream-colored hybrid to its grain sorghum lineup for the upcoming growing season.

AP 2440 is a medium-early — 63 days to mid-bloom hybrid — with the good early vigor, good standability and high yield potential expected from top-performing bronze or red grain hybrids.

"AP 2440 has a good disease resistance package, including Biotype E greenbug resistance," said Paul Kennedy, sorghum product manager for Agripro. "It's a very uniform, attractive grain sorghum that holds itself together all season long — even if harvest is late."

PennWest Recognizes Director

MERCER (Mercer Co.) — At the 1997 PennWest Farm Credit, ACA, annual meeting, Robert Hamilton, Jr., was recognized for 40 years of service as a director and 25 years as chairman of the board at PennWest Farm Credit, ACA. Hamilton will retire as a director in June.

William Hoffman, president and CEO of PennWest Farm Credit, said, "Bob's dedication and leadership to Farm Credit has had influence throughout the Farm Credit System. Bob's director position on our board will be filled, but his role will never be replaced. Bob and his wife, Phyllis, have our best wishes for continued success."

William S. Jackson, member of the board of AgFirst Farm Credit Bank, recognized Hamilton for "his significant contributions and dedicated service to the farmers of Western Pennsylvania."

Hamilton first became a Farm Credit director in 1957. At that time, he was appointed to fill an unexpired term on the Uniontown Production Credit Association Board. Over the years, he had the opportunity to serve on the boards of several different organizations that were a part of the Baltimore Farm Credit District. He also served with distinction on numerous district-wide committees.

Phyllis, and son, Lee, operate a farm in Claysville. Their milking herd numbers more than 200 head, making it one of the three largest dairy herds in southwestern Pennsylvania. The Hamiltons' own 800 acres and rent an additional 200 acres.

Carlson Leads Case's New Ag Business Unit

RACINE, Wis. — Case Corporation, as part of its continuing efforts to delight customers by maximizing their productivity through superior products, has consolidated its functional business components and established its North American agricultural equipment business unit led by Jon R. Carlson.

Carlson, appointed senior vice president and general manager, North American agricultural equipment business unit, will head the multi-billion-dollar organization which furthers the company's ongoing emphasis on customer focus. In his new position, Carlson has overall responsibility for engineering, manufacturing, sales and marketing for all of Case IH products and services in North America. He also oversees worldwide product strategy and development of large tractors, harvesting equipment and agricultural systems.

"Our new structure will maximize global synergies and provide customer, product and business consistency that puts Case in a strong position to help customers improve their operating performance," said Carlson. "This structure will intensify our efforts to establish customers as the drivers of our business, while we fully integrate engineering, manufacturing and sales as part of a single discipline to help ensure our customers are as productive and profitable as possible. Our intent is to provide growers with complete agricultural systems to increase their yields and efficiencies, thereby providing solutions from planting through harvesting."

Carlson pointed out that Case effectively integrates customers' opinions and input through its dealers network. Consistent with the goals of the new organization, Carlson announced the appointment of James Irwin, vice president, North American agricultural equipment sales. Irwin assumes the responsibility of managing distribution and marketing through the North American Case IH dealer organization.

"We recognize our dealer network and the strength of our dealers are fundamental to our business and that of our customers," Irwin said. Irwin has more than 30 years of experience in the agricultural industry, and most recently served Case as general manager, North American sales operations. Irwin holds a bachelor's degree in business education from Nebraska State University,

Carlson, who has more than 20 years of experience in the agricultural and construction industry, most recently was Case vice president, North American sales and marketing, a position which included responsibility for the company's construction and agricultural equipment divisions.

Carlson is a graduate of the University of Minnesota with a bachelor of science degree in marketing. He is also a graduate of the Harvard Business School's Advanced Management Program.

Structure Combines Traditional Features With Greater Affordability

DEKALB, Ill. — A.O. Smith Harvestore Products, Inc., recently introduced a new series of Slurrystore structures, the Model 96A.

Available in 24 sizes, with capacities from 143,000 to 2,160,800 gallons, this new series joins the Model 90A, and site-specific designs, to offer livestock farmers several options for engineered, positive containment manure management.

The introduction of the Model 96A comes at a time when environmentally-correct manure management practices are being sought out by livestock producers who have "been sold" on the Slurrystore structure, but budgetary considerations have often held them back from making the actual purchase.

"The challenge was to make the Slurrystore structure more accessible to today's cost-conscious livestock producer," said Product Engineer Dave Friederick. "Virtually everyone in the industry — regardless of the size of their operation — needs to practice sound environmental protection and odor management methods, but not everyone has the budget required to get their manure management program off the ground. We're confident that the new Slurrystore structure Model 96A will make it easier to do so."

To make the Slurrystore structure more affordable, Harvestore Products engineers found the "sweet spot": a design that combines the convenience and technology of the traditional Slurrystore structure with a more economical application of the same materials.

Like the Model 90A, the Model 96A features positive, above-ground containment of livestock manure, higher sidewalls and smaller exposed surface area than conventional manure storage systems which aid in odor management efforts, and the convenience of recycling stored manure as fertilizer when desired. The Model 96A Slurrystore structure can even be equipped with all of the same agitation options. There are two primary reasons the Model 96A is available for a reduced price. One is that it is non-expandable. Second is that it maximizes the design strength available for each glass-fused-to-steel panel and the foundation and floor design required for its precise height and diameter.

New Choices Highlight Soybean Lineups

SHAWNEE MISSION, Kan. — The 1996-97 AgriPro® and HyPerformer® brand soybean lineups are highlighted by the introduction of nineteen new soybeans, including conventional and herbicide-tolerant soybeans in a wide range of maturity groups.

"We've added new options to virtually all of our maturity groups to give soybean growers critical genetic, bred-in pest protection and management choices for their specific growing conditions," said Dr. Wayne Ellingson, director of soybean research for AgriPro Seeds, Inc. "The AgriPro soybean product line has always been very strong, and this year's introductions create a lineup that's even better suited to our customers' needs."

"Our conventional beans have consistently provided growers with excellent protection packages, high yields and quality and we've been able to place those same characteristics in our herbicide-tolerant lines," Ellingson said. "In fact, grower response to our Roundup Ready® and STS™ tolerant beans has exceeded our expectations."

Additions to the AgriPro lineup include two Group 0, two Group I, two Group II, five Group III, one Group IV, one Group VI and six new Roundup Ready or STS-tolerant beans.

AP 0550, a Mid Group 0 soybean, offers outstanding yields in narrow rows and higher populations on good ground. It produces medium-short plants with very good standability and very good Sclerotinia white mold and Phytophthora root rot tolerance.

AP 0929 is a showy, Late Group 0 soybean with strong emergence and exceptional yields. AP 0929 has very good Phytophthora root rot tolerance and offers exceptional yield potential for its maturity group.

AP 1618 has been a performance leader in AgriPro Group I yield trials over the past three years. With a similar plant type to AP 1394, AP 1618 has excellent stress tolerance, the Rps1c gene resistance and good field tolerance to Phytophthora.

AP 1953 has an outstanding combination of Rps1k gene Phy-tophthora resistance and good tolerance to iron deficiency chlorosis in high pH soils. A Late Group I soybean, AP 1953 has excellent emergence, strong early growth and resists seed shatter at harvest.

AP 2000 is an attractive, widely adapted Early Group II performance leader. It's a strong-standing, showy plant that performs well at all row widths and has Rps1k gene resistance to Phytophthora. AP 2000 also offers very good tolerance to iron deficiency chlorosis in high pH soils.

Another Early Group II entry, AP 2220 offers outstanding yield potential. It is a strong, quick emerger with excellent standability.

AP 2488STS is a new STS tolerant soybean with excellent emergence and good no-till adaptability. A Mid Group II, AP 2488STS offers very good field tolerance to Phytophthora, good standability and competitive yields.

AP 2802RR, a Late Group II Roundup Ready soybean excels in high-yield environments. It offers very strong emergence for excellent no-till adaptation. Its medium-short plants have excellent standability, stress tolerance and good seed retention.

AP 3030 is an Early Group III soybean with wide adaptation, quick emergence and consistent high yields. It is a very versatile choice that fits no-till or conventional and drilling 15- or 30-inch rows. AP 3030 produces medium-tall plants with good standability, good seed retention and Rps1k gene Phytophthora resistance.

AP 3250, Early Group III maturity, produces very attractive plants with excellent standability and seed shatter resistance. It's well-suited for drilling, 15- or 30-inch rows, has Rps1k gene Phytophthora resistance and performs well in high- or low-yield environments.

AP 3414 is a Mid Group III choice with vigorous, showy plants and Rps1k gene resistance to Phytophthora. It is excellent in low- and high-yield environments, has excellent standability and seed shatter resistance, and adapts very well to higher populations and narrow rows.

AP 3488STS is STS-tolerant, quick-emerging and well adapted to no-till management. It is a medium-tall, Mid Group III soybean with good seed retention through harvest.

AP 3601SCN is a new option for areas troubled by soybean cyst nematode and/or poorly drained soils. A Mid Group III soybean, AP 3601SCN offers strong emergence, strong yield performance, and an outstanding combination of races 3 and 14 soybean cyst nematode resistance and Rps1k gene Phytophthora resistance.

AP 3616 is a Mid Group III soybean adapted to all soil types and management styles. It produces medium-short plants with very good emergence, canopy cover, standability and seed retention. It also has Rps1k gene immunity to 21 races of Phytophthora.

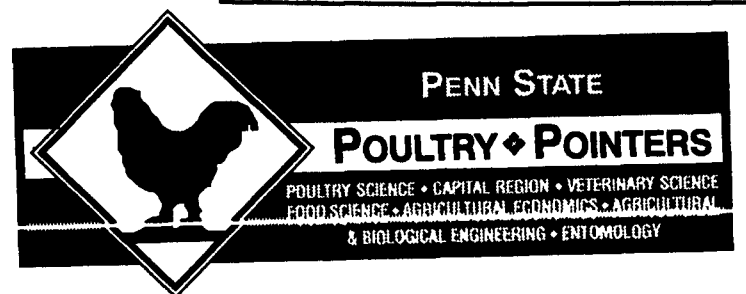

AP 3868 is a showy, medium plant that adapts very well to high-yield environments. It has excellent standability and seed shatter resistance, strong emergence and Rps1k gene Phytophthora resistance. AP 3868 is a good no-till option in Late Group III maturity.

Another Late Group III introduction, AP 3901SCN is resistant to races 3 and 14 of soybean cyst nematode. It produces medium-tall, attractive plants with excellent standability, good stress tolerance, and consistent high yields in cyst-infected soils.

AP 3988STS is a Late Group III soybean that produces tall plants with good brown stem rot resistance and STS tolerance. It canopies well, provides good standability and very good field tolerance to Phytophthora.

AP 4400 is a new soybean from AgriPro with a strong combination of Rps1k gene Phytophthora resistance and high yields in the Mid Group IV class. AP 4400 provides good standability, excellent seed retention, and outstanding yields in both high- and low-yield environments.

HY 663 is a new Mid Group VI soybean with excellent yield potential. It can be planted across a wide range of soil types in both wide and narrow rows.

U.S. egg exports are another bright spot for the movement of domestic eggs. In 1996 egg trading abroad took place to the tune of $146 million, a 23 percent increase over the amount traded in 1995.

Our three major shell egg markets are Hong Kong, the United Arab Emirates, and Canada. Hong Kong is primarily a brown egg market. The first 10 months of 1996 trade into that market has increased 30 percent over 1995 levels. The Canadian market was once our second largest importer, but the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) has preserved the Canadian tariffs and quota system, dropping export movement to third place status. However, the Middle East, including the United Arab Emirates, Kuwait and Oman, imported more than 70 million dozen in 1995.

Major U.S. egg product export markets include Japan, Mexico, and Canada, number one, two, and three, respectively. Exports to Mexico have increased threefold in 1996, and while Canada may have reduced shell egg imports, the movement of U.S. egg products into that market is increasing.

The two largest hurdles to U.S. egg exports are the NAFTA and its disappointing impact on Canadian and Mexican trade, and the significant cost of ocean shipping. On the positive side, U.S. egg production costs are among the lowest in the world. Both the American Egg Board and U.S. Poultry and Egg Association are aggressively promoting shell eggs and egg products abroad as approximately 96 percent of the world's consumers live outside the United States.

Perhaps the best news is that while U.S. egg exports may only amount to 2 to 3 percent of total egg sales, it only takes a 1 percent change in domestic egg supply to change the price of eggs approximately $.05 per dozen.

Other U.S. marketing trends to follow in the future include a trend that currently is catching on in Europe. The green or environmentally friendly egg, like green detergents and other green products that are produced with respect for the environment, might be on the American horizon.

Eggs produced or processed using HACCP principles may also provide a marketing niche with some consumers wishing to reduce their risk of foodborne illness. The Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program seal and others like it will become a more sought-after, value-added component of eggs and other foods. Nationally marketed eggs like Egglands Best™ and the new Eggstacy™ will keep cropping up with aggressive marketing to ensure demand.

I believe we will see federal organic standards and a further growth of this niche market in eggs and other products. New labeling technology using laser-jet printing will allow better quality labeling of eggs with logos, nutritional information, and catchy market slogans.

In summary, marketing for eggs means the process or technique of promoting, selling, and distributing eggs with value and service. For the industry there are several bright spots for egg marketing, including egg products, specialty eggs, and exports. Remember — even though specialty eggs and exports are a small part of American production, only a 1 percent change in our domestic egg supply can change the price of eggs approximately $.05 per dozen.

Regionalization Docket Nearly Final

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A much anticipated decision on a proposed rule designed to expand trade of United States agricultural products while maintaining animal health will be made within 90 days.

At the Livestock Conservation Institute's 81st Annual Meeting, Dr. Joan Arnoldi, deputy administrator of the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), Veterinary Services, said regionalization is the key provision in our international trade agreements.

Under regionalization countries recognize pest and disease status on an area or region rather than on a national basis, thereby allowing trade of agricultural products to occur from regional areas, Arnoldi said. Adherence to this principle should reduce the impact of trade disruptions if a disease or pest outbreak occurs in a limited region of the United States, according to Arnoldi.

"Regionalization takes into account that some areas of a country may have a more advanced animal health program than others," she said.

Other countries are waiting for the United States to make a move on regionalization, Arnoldi said, but the United States is running out of time to be an international leader on this issue. After reviewing numerous comments, Arnoldi said the agency can either draft a new proposal, incorporate the comments and suggestions into the current draft, or make the current draft a final rule. She said the legality of incorporating comments is being reviewed, but she believes this route to be the best.

Walnut Tree Group To Meet

GERMANTOWN, Md. — The Maryland Chapter of the Walnut Council, a group of conservationists interested and involved in the planting, growing and use of walnut trees, invites growers to its May 3 meeting at Marantha Tree Farm.

The group will tour parts of this 93-acre tree farm in northern Harford County to study and discuss many species of differing ages. They will observe and discuss management of a somewhat mature black walnut stand and discuss control of vegetation pests such as multiflora rose, honeysuckle, and trees of heaven (ailanthus). Demonstrations of equipment for site clearing, brush control, and wood processing will be provided.

Penn State Researches Perceptions Of Animal Agriculture

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — How do young people learn about agriculture, and where do they get the information?

Is it based on science? Or is it from self-serving organizations?

To find the answers, Penn State researchers are studying public perceptions of farm animal production methods.

"The information children receive will influence their opinions for the rest of their lives," said Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, professor of animal science. "To make sure children have a balanced view of the use of animals, we need to determine what they know and how they get their information."

Students and their teachers are being surveyed about animal agriculture, animal agriculture by-products, food safety, animal well-being, how animal agriculture affects the environment, and what farmers do to protect the environment for future generations.

Students in grades 6-8 are asked questions such as "Do you know which farm animals these products come from?" and "How did you learn about farm animals?" They also are asked to rank the importance of topics such as safety of the food supply, disposal of animal wastes, use of chemicals on food, how farm animals are treated, and how animals are treated in research. Students in grades 11-12 are asked similar but more detailed questions about topics such as pesticide residues, water contamination, growth hormones and antibiotic residues in food.

Preliminary results indicate teachers are students' primary source of information about agriculture. "This emphasizes the need to determine what teachers know about animal agriculture and where they obtain their information," Wilson noted. "Most teachers do not have direct experience with agriculture. They rely on information provided to them, which may come from activist organizations. Teachers need access to factual, science-based information to give their students a balanced view."

The primary concern of students and teachers in all grade levels surveyed was the safety of the food supply. "This may reflect recent publicity about contaminated unpasteurized apple juice and undercooked hamburger causing illness and death," Wilson noted. "These incidents reveal the power of public perception. Public education has been shown to be the best tool against unfounded negative public perceptions."

All groups also were concerned about animal well-being. "Farm animals are treated differently than companion animals, such as cats or dogs," Wilson said. "Without sufficient understanding of the reasons for farm animal procedures, the general public may view some practices as cruel and unnecessary."

As part of this project, Penn State researchers developed a best management practices manual, which explains practices such as tail docking, beak clipping, enclosed housing, individual stalls, and antibiotic use. Other materials, which address issues such as food safety, animal welfare, and farm safety, were developed by members of the Penn State student club, Students for the Responsible Use of Animals, and are made available at events such as Ag Progress Days and the Pennsylvania Farm Show. These materials also are distributed to Penn State Cooperative Extension county offices and other educational groups.

Farmers in Lancaster County also are being surveyed to determine how they think they are perceived by the public and to give them an opportunity to assess their industry and its methods.

"We chose Lancaster County because it has a growing urban population in a traditionally rural farming area," explained Patricia A. Nordstrom, project assistant. "We asked farmers if they had received any complaints about their operation and the nature of the complaints. They also were asked to rank the concern level of how they believe the public feels about issues such as agricultural chemicals, food cost, disposal of animal wastes and farm animal welfare."

The researchers also surveyed 1,500 non-farm residents of Lancaster County. "We also wanted to identify concerns of these residents about area farms," Nordstrom said. "Farmers who are aware of how they are perceived by the general public will be better equipped to address the public's concerns."

Producers, students, teachers, and members of the general public are encouraged to participate in this project by contacting Wilson at (814) 863-3659 or Patricia Nordstrom at (814) 863-6059.

Producers are also being asked to participate in a separate Penn State project about animal handling and transportation. "Money, time and effort can be lost if animals are improperly handled or transported, resulting in losses due to stress, bruises, hide damage or injuries," Wilson said. "We're surveying producers about the industry's handling and transporting practices. Producers are asked to identify improvements they have made and where further improvements can be made."

These projects are supported by research funds administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Penn State appropriations. Other researchers participating in the project include Dr. Timothy W. Kelsey, assistant professor of agricultural economics; Dr. Audrey N. Maretzki, professor of food science; and Dr. Charles W. Pitts, professor of entomology.

GEHL
Disc Mower ConditionerONLY FROM GEHL

Gehl's exclusive, full width, totally enclosed cutterbar support frame extends beneath the entire cutterbar. The cutterbar (outlined in yellow) is protected from direct impact with rocks or other field obstructions.

High-speed Cutting With Unmatched Durability

Gehl's reliable, proven disc cutterbar features gear-driven discs, rotating at 3,000 rpm. The gears operate in an oil bath for less wear and long life. Each disc features two heavy-duty reversible knives for twice the cutting life. Specially designed v-blades and built-in lifters on each disc smoothly lift the cut crop into the conditioning rolls.

The skid shoes are attached to the support frame for added strength. There's one skid shoe beneath each cutting disc for additional support.

Hammer Discharge
Patented Free Swinging
Hammer Expeller

Forged Steel
Hammer

The expeller on all ProTwin models features 15 forged steel hammers mounted on 1/2" shaft. The hammers pivot on 1/4" bolts with nylon anti seize type bushings that allow free movement. The expeller rotates at over 800 RPM allowing each eight pound hammer to swing down into the material peeling it off and slinging it underhand in a fine spread pattern with no clumps. The 3 wide free swinging hammers absorb shock and tolerate most foreign objects. Each hammer is faced with a work hardening manganese steel wear plate for longer life and low cost replacement. The adjustable shroud allows easy hammer clearance setting for optimum spread pattern width. This proven hammer expeller design enables fine spreading control and material calibration through the combination of the hydraulic door opening and ground speed.

The right auger is driven at the rear and is shear pin protected. Bearings, chains and sprockets are easily accessible for routine maintenance.

GEHL Scavenger® Manure
Spreaders

In Stock at Binkley & Hurst

THE BEST JUST GOT BETTER!

Better Performance. Gehl Scavenger®, the original V-tank spreader, has built a well-deserved reputation for delivering unmatched performance in a wide variety of materials. The new Scavenger takes that performance to the next level with even better spreading patterns in the toughest heavily-bedded manures.

Increased Durability. Not only has the new Scavenger been designed to out-perform all other V tank spreaders, but the main drive system components have been beefed up for extra durability and increased dependability.

Why is Scavenger the Best? One big reason is the unique new round-core auger. This auger features segmented paddles grouped in a spiral pattern. This fighting configuration delivers more material to the discharge expeller in less time for faster unloading. The paddles are precisely positioned to deliver more uniform feeding to the discharge expeller. This exceptional design breaks up and blends all types of manure. The auger is hydraulically powered both up and down (unlike competitive units that use springs, gravity or fixed augers). This design provides more control to chop through bridged material or power down through heavy loads.

Outstanding Application Control. Gehl's proven Varifo discharge system has been made even better. It's 33 percent wider on the Model 1315. On all new models the expeller assembly has been significantly strengthened. New square-tooth expeller paddles spread smoothly and evenly. You choose the rate you want, from heavy spring-time spreading to light top-dressing. With Scavenger you have complete control right at your fingertips.

Scavenger is Simply Better. The Gehl Scavenger is a simple spreader. It's solid and durable with sealed, welded tank construction and a full length channel steel sub-frame. Every Scavenger is built to deliver top performance year after year.

Your Gehl Dealer can show you why the new Scavenger V-tank spreader is still the best.

Call Binkley & Hurst Bros. For A Good Quality Forage Box

America's #1 Forage Box

The Gehl tradition of building the premier forage box is well known. Gehl forage boxes feature a simple design with few moving parts for increased reliability. They do an outstanding job in a wide variety of conditions. They last long and maintain high resale value.

Gehl's newest forage box continues the tradition with added features including: true, infinitely variable-speed drive; improved box roof; improved beater design; an optional 18-inch folding conveyor extension; and improved durability throughout.

This box is loaded with the convenience and performance features you demand for smooth, fast unloading and worry-free reliability.

Compare the performance, compare the convenience, compare the quality and compare the reliability. You'll see that Gehl delivers the best value for your forage box dollar.

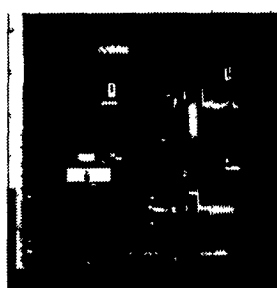

THE ROOF,
AND STAKES ALL HAVE A 10-YEAR RUSTTHROUGH
WARRANTY.

Steel, side stakes, designed as steel 2x4's, are made from 16-gauge aluminized steel. The upright stakes are reinforced for heavy-duty performance. Box sides are made from 20-gauge aluminized steel.

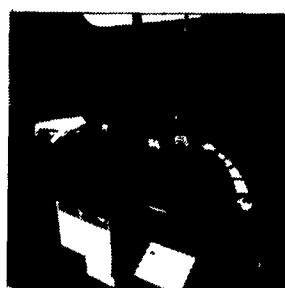

Improved beater design. Gehl's third beater features extended tines to do an even better job of breaking up clumps to provide smoother crop delivery into the cross conveyor. Fewer clumps falling onto the conveyor and into the blower mean reduced unloading time and reduced front end spill-over. It also means less horsepower is required to operate the blower. One-piece tine rods extend through the beater tube for extra strength and long life.

Infinite variable speed drive. Gehl's "Vari-Sweep" system quickly empties the entire box to get you back to the field in a hurry. Bed chain speed is infinitely adjustable from 3.7 to 10.66 feet per minute. Match unloading speed to crop consistency and blower capacity to maximize efficiency and minimize time spent at the silo. The variable speed belt is warranted for five years.

The main drive features extra-strong 50HE chain. Other drive areas use 50 chain.

Single lever control. A single lever engages the beaters and regulates bed chain speed for simple and total control of the unloading cycle. The shift handle is ergonomically designed for comfortable and easy operation.

Flexibility is the key to staying productive. And that's exactly what you'll find with the AGCO® Allis 5670 utility tractor.

The Key To Effective Middle Management.

In fact, this mid-range tractor has a 63 PTO hp engine that offers you the ultimate in maneuverability. Its low height and low center of gravity make this the ideal tractor for working inside buildings and other confined work areas. And because the platform is low to the ground, it's easy to get on and off the tractor.

- The synchromesh transmission has 16 forward and 16 reverse speed choices, with synchronized shifting in four gears and a synchronized forward/reverse shuttle.
- These directional changes help to reduce loader and rear blade cycle times.
- The AWD models feature a true centerline drive shaft for more efficient power transfer and less maintenance.
- As always, behind every AGCO Allis tractor lies a 4-year/
4,000-hour warranty that's backed by your dealer.

To get a closer look at the 5670, stop by and see us. We'll be happy to show you the way to higher productivity.

Finally, a practical way to apply organic mulch to row crops

Organic mulch is the natural way to suppress weeds, help retain soil moisture, and improve soil conditions. Trouble is, hand mulching takes too much time and effort. Now the Millcreek Row Mulcher makes it easy to mulch berries, grapes, fruit trees, and other row crops. One operator can mulch an acre in just a couple hours depending on conditions.

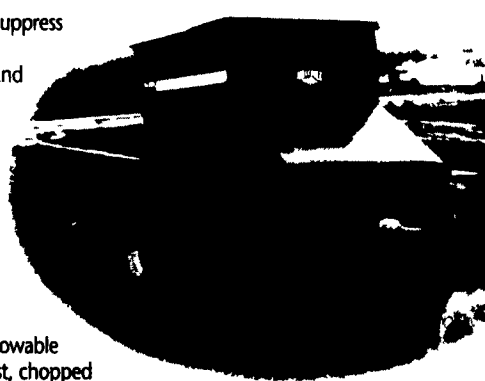

Spread A Variety of Materials, Including Lime

You can spread all types of stemless flowable mulches, such as wood chips, sawdust, chopped bark, even compost, with plenty of clearance to avoid plant damage. Plus, the Millcreek Row Mulcher is ideal for banding lime and other materials requiring lighter applications. The optional metering gate gives you complete control of the coverage so you can tailor applications to best suit your cultivation practices.

For Small Growers

This may be the affordable machine you've been looking for to mulch berries, grapes, and other row crops. Think of the labor you'll save.

The unique Millcreek Row Mulcher eliminates all the hand labor for mulching.

For Commercial Growers

Choose from 3.1, 4.5, and 6.8 cubic yard capacities. Or call to discuss your special requirements.

The corn cracker can be changed in 5 minutes to switch from corn to hay. The Jaguar's efficient processing produces quality silage for higher milk production.

The efficient cutting system has a full width metal detector, 30" wide chevron cutting drum and full width 8-blade accelerator.

Service is easy because compartment covers quickly swing open to provide easy access to the engine and cooling system.

The operator can safely sharpen the chopping knives and precisely adjust the shearbar from the driver's seat automatically.

Vitamix Makes Antibiotics Obsolete!

You Can Sell The Milk When You Use Vitamix Instead Of Antibiotics

A dairyman's helper gave a cow an antibiotic and forgot to make a written record of it. He then went on vacation and for the next five days, the milk from 900 cows went down the drain!! The $42,000.00 lost would have bought enough Vitamix to last for years and years for that dairyman's whole herd.

You can sell the milk when feeding Vitamix. Vitamix is a mixture of vitamins, minerals, enzymes, electrolytes, and proteins, especially calculated to feed the immune system. Vitamix is the result of over 20 years research and over 20,000 feeding experiments. Vitamix ingredients are so micro pulverized and easily digestible that some of them melt in the mouth and are absorbed into the bloodstream while the cow is still chewing her feed. Her organs increase the output of antibodies (white cells) within minutes, and can often double the output of antibodies within one hour after consuming Vitamix, and you can get Vitamix without a prescription. Vitamix is all natural. You just put Vitamix in the feed whenever there are symptoms of a contagious disease or infection.

The cow's immune system can cure any and every kind of contagious disease and infection quicker, safer, more consistently than any medical drug in the world when you support the immune system. The immune system is the only real defense. I keep cows and horses for feeding experiments. The last time I used an antibiotic was in 1984 and haven't lost a cow, calf or horse since I quit using antibiotics.

Any time any human or animal gets a contagious disease or any kind of infection, it is for one reason, and one reason only; The immune system failed to do an adequate job of defending against it. In other words, the immune system let you down.

Every time you use antibiotics, sulfa drug or an immune stimulator; you weaken the immune system. See the Physicians Desk Reference (PDR) for more information on the side effects of antibiotics. The information in the PDR was provided by the drug companies that make the drugs as required by law.

Shouldn't we be feeding the immune system instead? Support the immune system. Their lives and health depend on it. Feed Vitamix every time for every contagious disease or infection.

Vitamix is the best procedure in the world for Mastitis. It is quick and easy and you can sell the milk when feeding Vitamix.

How long does it take when you take the "Support the immune system approach?" I have seen calves that were down, had high fever, bloody scours and were dehydrated. One needed help to hold its head up. The only thing I gave them was Vitamix and water. In three hours, I had to run them down and get them cornered to give the Vitamix. Dairyman tell me that Vitamix is faster than anything else they ever used.

When there is a serious case of anything contagious or infectious; I give Vitamix once an hour for three hours, or until they are back on their feed and doing noticeably better. I continue Vitamix six times daily for a few days. Vitamix typically costs only $2 to $3 a day for a cow (less for a calf). The total cost for one cow for one illness is typically $8 to $10 from start to finish.

Vitamix costs less than antibiotics, and you can get it without a prescription. Vitamix is completely drug free!!! You can sell the milk when you use Vitamix !!! (When you use antibiotics, you pour the milk out for 5 days, sometimes more. You risk making a mistake and pouring all your milk out for 5 days or more.)

You save money Every Time you use Vitamix. Get some Vitamix now to keep on hand. Use Vitamix as soon as you see symptoms of anything contagious or infectious. You will know you did the right thing within hours.

Preventing and curing all contagious disease and infections boils down to this. Increasing the capacity to produce white cells (Antibodies). All white cells are made by the bone marrow. Antibiotics cause "bone marrow depression" thereby reducing its ability to make white cells to fight diseases and infection (See Physician's Desk Reference Book [PDR]).

I have done over 20,000 feeding experiments on healing the body, and have yet to find an incurable contagious disease or infection.

Why sit around waiting for a miracle? You can order Vitamix right now. Miracles are great and they do happen now and then; if you wait around one might happen for you. But the immune system is a miracle. You can order Vitamix today and keep it on hand, then you will have it when you need it.

Vitamix ...when you need a miracle. The best source of information about Vitamix is people who have used it. Ask a friend about Vitamix.

THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21st CENTURY?"

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency; this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

Protect your valuable feeds from the elements... increase the efficiency of your feeds, your animals, and your labor.

ADVANTAGE... CONCRETE

"IF YOU NEED A SILO...
YOU NEED TO CALL BOB FRANCIS..."

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

Beitzel Spraying is now distributing:

SAFECIDE® BRAND IC

For the control of darkling beetles, hide beetles and flies in poultry houses and for control of fire ants

Advantages:

- Efficacious—boron-based SafeCide® Brand IC kills larvae and adults. Breaks the beetle life cycle and reduces diseases carried by beetles
- Contains an extremely safe and effective pest control agent (99% orthoboric acid)—larvae and beetles die 3 to 5 days after contact and ingestion.
- Provides long-lasting residual results. Keeps on working up to 12 months — longer than most available products.
- Provides an effective barrier. Kills larvae and adults as they emerge.
- Cost effective — low cost based on per day of activity.
- Can be applied as a dust or spray. Flexible application options let SafeCide® Brand IC fit easily into your particular management program.
- EPA approved, ecologically friendly—non-carcinogenic, no toxic residues. Safe to be applied by humans.
- Is field proven. Field studies* show heavily infested farms treated with SafeCide® Brand IC have better feed conversion rates, increased weight gains, greater livability, and fewer condemnations than untreated farms.
- No insecticidal resistance reported.
- Retards the growth of Aspergillus in the litter.
- Approved for use in the control of fire ants and flies.

IN ALUMINUM BODIES EBY BUILDS IT

M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

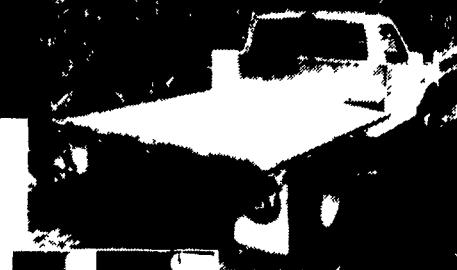

- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24', landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- LANDSCAPE BODIES - Lengths to 12', We'll build to your specs!

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

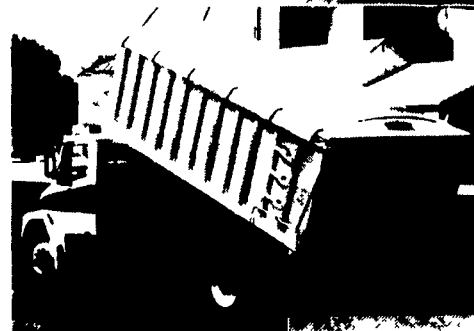

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer customer options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business - building bodies to haul it is ours.
